

ARTICLE VII

In the event that one of the Contracting Parties should make representations to the other with regard to the application of the present Modus Vivendi, the latter will give friendly consideration to such representations, and if, within sixty days after the formal delivery of the representations, a satisfactory adjustment should not have been made or an agreement reached, the Party making such representations, within thirty days after the expiration of the aforementioned period, may denounce this Modus Vivendi on giving the other Party not less than sixty days' notice prior to the date of termination.

ARTICLE VIII

The present Modus Vivendi shall remain in effect for one year, and shall continue automatically for annual periods unless denounced by one of the two Governments on prior notice of at least three months, or in accordance with the provisions of the previous Article.

This Note and the favourable reply of Your Excellency shall constitute a Commercial Modus Vivendi which shall enter into effect on the first day of December, 1950.

I take this opportunity of renewing to Your Excellency the assurance of my highest and most distinguished consideration.
