Principles and Guidelines for
Restoration, Conservation and Enhancement Programs and Projects

Principles

1. Restoration, conservation and enhancement programs and projects shall be consistent with the protection of existing wild salmon stocks and the habitats upon which they depend.
2. Given the wild nature of the Yukon River and its salmon stocks, and the substantial risks associated with large-scale enhancement through artificial propagation, such enhancement activities are inappropriate at this time.
3. Artificial propagation shall not be used as a substitute for effective fishery regulation, stock and habitat management or protection.
