Unique Theatre Makes First Presentation in The Maritime Provinces

At the Unique yesterday marvelous things happened—people appeared on the screen and began to talk, not in silent pantomime of the lips, but with their actual voices — one saw them speaking and heard them speaking.

silent pantomime of the lips, but with their actual voices — one saw them speaking and heard them speaking. The audience sat fascinated, yet puzzled, and half afraid they were being made the objects of some hoax or of some cleverly-timed gramaphone attachment.

However, when they saw a dancer appear and dance to music provided by a hidden orchestra, which they knew was not in the theatre, and were convinced could not be behind the sereen, they began to believe; and when they saw Puck and White, the headline twadeville act, perform their funny antics and heard them actually sing and talk, it represented one more proof that this was a genuine wonder, and not trickery or mechanically devised deception.

It was the DeForest Phonofilm, the invention of the man who gave radio to the world, and who has now succeeded in photographing sound waves simultaneously with the photography of action for the moving picture.

The film star spent some interesting moments also in inspecting the marvelous library which includes such priceless treasures as first edition Shakespeare, Dante, etc., with rarities like the Gutenberg Bible valued at a quarter of a million dollars. The boys of the famous old school were delighted to meet Dick face to face and he was no less pleased to talk to them. Eton College, incidentally, was built by Henry VI and has more than 1,000 students.
