Rome, June 14.—Three Italian cardinals were added to the sacred college yesterday when Pope Benedict, in a secret consistory, received the resignation of Monsignor Giovanni Tacci Porcelli, the papal major domo, Monsignor Camillo Laurenti, secretary of the congregation of the Propaganda, and Monsignor Achille Ratti, papal nuncio to Poland.

The ceremony was most solemn and picturesque, but none of the ordinary spectators who usually attend consistory functions were permitted to attend.

After intoning a prayer for the direction of the Holy Spirit, and reading an allocation, the Pontiff proceeded to announce the names of the new cardinals, asking for each the approval of the members of the sacred college.

"Although I had a delightful trip and enjoyed it immensely, I have come back with the firm hope that I shall never have to live in any other country but Canada," said Premier Foster, who, with Mrs. Foster, returned yesterday after a trip to Europe.

Mr. Foster said that he would not recommend the re-opening of the New Brunswick office in London. This office was closed two years ago, and at the present time, Nova Scotia and British Columbia were the only provinces which had separate offices.

While in London the premier attended the organization meeting of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, which was created through the activity of Canadians resident in the British Isles.

ST. JOHN MAN IN HORRORS OF PUEBLO FLOOD

Writes of Fearful Scenes of Death and Ruin.

River Raged Through City, Fire Added to Fearful Conditions—Some Experiences in Which He Had Part.

A St. John man has just received the following letter from a relative in Pueblo, Colorado, dated June 5, and mailed two days later:

"I write a tale of desolation, destruction and death, with all the forces of Hell turned loose to wreak vengeance on this city. No water, no gas, no light of any kind, except a meager supply of candles and kerosene lamps; no bread, no heat, several hundreds drowned and the damned river rising again. Yesterday, I was much shaken and am not in normal condition of mind as I write. I cannot recount the horrors I saw yesterday while wading knee deep in oozy slime. Business blocks battered and pieces by floating trees and piles of burning lumber. Houses roaring like furnaces, my own in Fifth street in the worst part of the fire. However, I managed to get a bucket brigade under the direction of one or two firemen and the houses were finally saved with the exception of the barn which was burned. I had my houses well insured, and if they had burned I would have been much better off, but there are thousands of families homeless, and though it will cost me $500 plus to re-build, it is better so.

We are shut off from the outside world, no railroads, no telephones, no telegrams and food shortage threatened. The city is under martial law. Above rages a huge airplane most of the day and they drop us no papers, no one knows why. It is so dark as I write that I can scarcely see at three o'clock in the afternoon and here come the accused river again racing up Fourth street, the levees being gone. No one could imagine the amount of silt corruption and heavy logs carried by the river. No one could hear without being moved to desperation the tales told me yesterday, as I waded in the mud. I have been here thirty years and know the bulk of the business and poor people, where the ruin is. Friday night, June 3, a heavy rain fell, and the water rose and deluge I cannot describe. The water rose higher by ten feet than our last flood in 1894, the sky was a lurid brightness, with flames. The King lumber yard had an unslacked lime warehouse, and when the water struck it the whole plant was fired. Piles of burning lumber drifted off in the ten foot current and stacked against the poor little homes in Peppersauce. I watched the disaster in the deluge and of course was almost drowned from the down pour from overhead. The boat kept arriving with poor wretches, mostly children, pale, well high gone. Today I am tired and sore and filled with horror. Hope they will not ask me to identify any of the dead.
