MIRAMICHI ADVANCE, CHATHAM, NEW BRUNSWICK, AUGUST 28, 1884.

HOW I BECAME A FARMER.

to live or die, I honestly think I would have preferred the latter.

It was a low, small, one-story house, weather-beaten and dilapidated. Two of the front windows were boarded up, and the other two had half the glass panes broken out. Off to the left was a still more dilapidated barn, the great a still more dilapidated barn, the great doins of which were propped up. Not and I borrowed a neighbor's ox-team to only the yard fence, but all the fences, plow three acres of the old stubble in sight, were shattered and falling

The place, as I saw at second glance, was uninhabited, and from the torest of tall, dry thistles before the house door, tall, dry thistics before the notice with a log there in my struct ; the world for a long time. At least, I thought, interview in the body of the struct is the I shall not be denied a night's lodging here.

the room, and after shouting to make the broken windows. These I set mysure that no one was about to object, I self, on rainy days. built a prodigous fire, and going to the barn fetched in armfuls of old straw there and made a bed for myself.

I was hungry, yet still more tired, and after a time I fell asleep.

In the spring of 1874, I was as home-less and houseless as anybody in Boston. I was nineteen. My mother was dead, and my father, a crippled sailor, was an that I really meant business, any that a bout and treated me like a fellow inmate of a charitable institution.
