ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS. (Continued.)

Mrs. H. :- Sherbets are usually served at the end of a dinner, but they are sometimes eaten before the game instead of a Roman punch. They may be served in glass, in orange baskets, in fancy paper cases or in moulds. Sherbet is often combined with ice cream, two layers of the latter being allowed to one of the former. Directions for making various kinds of sherbets are given in Dainty Desserts: Plain and Fancy, published by us at 6d. or 15 cents.

L. M. A. :- Gothic architecture has nothing to do with the Goths, but is a term of contempt bestowed by the architects of the Renaissance period on Medieval architecture, which they term as Gothic or clumsy - fit for barbarians.

JUDITH :- An excellent cough medicine that may be made at home consists of Olive oil 2 ounces
Paregoric 2 "
Honey 2 "
