Toronto, Sept. 28, 1931.

Dear Mrs. Stanfield:

I cannot let the occasion pass without expressing to you as well as may be done my feelings just after the sad news of the death of your distinguished husband.

Mr. Stanfield was really in the prime of life and the news of his death came as a terrible shock to me, as it doubtless did to his thousands of friends and admirers throughout Canada. His place in the business world of our Dominion was very high. Especially, however, I recall at this time, with sentiments of deepest gratitude, the long years of loyal service which he gave to the cause of which I was for a long time the sponsor. Never was there a day when I had the least difficulty with him, and never can there be any time now when I do not look back upon my association with him with the greatest pleasure and satisfaction.

I am glad to think that in the latter days of his life he enjoyed something of the recognition which had long been his due.
