

of human endurance, unparalleled, I believe, in the annals of fortitude. Of London, it will be written and spoken, in proud memory, that when skies rained destruction upon her, she stood amidst the ruins of her ancient monuments, not bowed, not weeping, not despairing, but erect, resolute and unafraid. This city today is held in high honour above all the cities of the earth. The very name of London reverberates around the world like the sound waves of a great bell calling together all who love and cherish freedom. I am here, today, to tell the brave men and women of Britain that that call is being answered, and will continue to be answered, in ever larger measure, from across the sea.

In this world struggle to thwart aggression and to end oppression, Canada is at Britain's side. The United States of America is lending powerful support. Side by side, we, of the new world, stand in your defence, which we believe to be our own defence. Each, at the other's side, each, in her own way, but both, in unflinching and in ever increasing measure, will continue to supply material and vital means of ultimate and certain victory.