KINGSTON.

Too genuinely interested in your fellow-creatures to be vexed with their vagaries, you will find the highest happiness in life to be an unselfish devotion to their interests. "I am among you as one that serveth," is the motto to-day of the sensible man who wishes to escape from the mental and moral worries of this much-perplexed world, and I give it as a prescription specially suited to the librarian. The outlook for your profession is bright, and you may help to make it brighter here in Wales by encouraging in every way the improvement of the conditions under which you work. One thing I should dearly like to see—an up-to-date School of the Book in connexion with the National Library and this College; and if anything I have said here hastens its establishment I will feel in Lucian's words "that I shall have had a share in its building if not in the dedicatory inscription; my finger-tips will at least have touched their wet mortar".
