SURVIVORS OF SUNKEN CRUISERS TELL THRILLING STORIES

Men of Aboukir, Cressy and Hogue Acted Like Heroes.

—Had Little Time to Think After Vessels Were Hit.

Liverpool, September 25,-About 200 of the survivor of the ill-fated cruisers Aboukir, Cressy, and Hogue arrived here yesterday, says the Liverpool Post. Some of the men had thrilling stories to tell of their experiences, and they did so in simple language, after the manner of sailors, and jocularly treated incidents that would have remained a nightmare with some men for the remainder of their lives. According to several of the men, the Aboukir, the first vessel struck, sank in about twenty-five minutes, Hogue in three minutes, and the Cressy in the As one man put it, it was all over in an bour. All three ships had gone down, and nothing was left but a huge mass of partially-clothed and naked men struggling in the water to get pieces of the timber or anything else that would keep them ate winds, fair and warm.

One of the modest heroes of the Aboukir said that about half-past six on Tuesday morning he was lying in his bunk when suddenly he heard a terrible commotion on deck, and then a horrible smell came rushing through. He asked one of his mates had they struck a mine or been shelled, and he replied; A little after this somebody shouted down to where he was lying: "Is anybody left?", He thought it was about time to get up, and did so pretty quickly. On deck he found everything in order-no panic-and all the men as if nothing had gone wrong. The Cressy sent them a wireless, "Have you been torpedoed?" and they replied, "Don't know yet." When they saw a.m. Querida. the Hogue list shortly afterwards they knew.

"When Captain Drummond The sailor proceeded: he's a hero—saw there was no hope he gave the 12.30 a.m. Alden. Every man for himself. Take your own chance, and then the boys simply went for it. Seattle, October 5 .- The Blue funnel liner Talthy ius, in port from the Orient, brings details of th disabling of the German auxiliary cruiser, Princes Alice, by the British auxiliary cruiser Empress of Russia, formerly a Canadian Pacific liner, off the Philippines early in September, as already briefly cabled. The German vessel was bound for Tsing Tau and was reputed to carry $10,000,000 for the Ger man officials there. She was sighted by the Empress and fled at once pursued by the Britisher. The Empress carries four 6-inch guns and six 4.7 inch guns. The Alice had eight 6-inch guns. The Em press overhauled the German boat, and a running fight followed.
