ant dissidents came to the Assembly of Repan Catholics, Ceits und Normans, and demanded this favour; year after year the bill was passed by the Assembly, and refuses by the Council; but at last it was forced down their Angle-Saxon honours' throats. Now, the Lower Casadians make an profession of tolerance, but they are issufet to degive the wrongs they receive, and, shows all, they are expressly communated to love even their enemies, and as long as the Romans Catholics act on those principles, there is not much danger that the Church of England or any other sect will be oppraised. He did not wish to hart the feelings of the Upper Casadians; the admired them, and perceived that they had many sund qualities i but untotiquistly they are too, much divided, by sectarianism. Of that he was consinced, and it was fortunate that there was considered the found. The Lowest Capadians form that counterbalance them feelings of asctarian hostility that are expressed in the House and out of the House. The Lowest Capadians form that counterbalancing power, and as long as they possess that indusence powers, and as long as they possess that indusence
