"I have never known a time when business was better than it has been this year," said a King street merchant to The Planet this morning. "I have actually doubled my business and the other merchants with whom I have been speaking all say that this has been a most successful year." This is good evidence that the city is growing.

TO COME DOWN

Angus Crow, the local coal and wood dealer, says that although the dealers in the city have not lowered the price of coal, it will not be long before it comes down to $7.00 per ton. It is beginning to arrive in the city in fairly good quantities and is $5.50 on the cars here.

Mr. Crow unloaded a car of soft coal yesterday.

FUEL BOX FIRE

The firemen were called out to Manson Campbell's factory Saturday evening about twenty minutes after five. The shavings in the fuel box had in some manner caught fire, supposedly from the furnace, and the employees were unable to extinguish the flames without the aid of the department.

The alarm was hurriedly sent in from the factory and the firemen promptly responded. It was found that the flames were, fortunately, confined to the fuel box. After working some time they succeeded in smothering the blaze and returned to the hall. They were, however, called back to the factory about ten o'clock and this time the flames were completely extinguished. No damage was incurred.

The firemen deserve great credit for the quickness and promptness with which they responded to the alarm.

DRINK DID IT

A Little Temperance Lecture Upon the Life of the Late Stephen Corbett.

A very queer coincidence happened in connection with the tragic death of the late Stephen Corbett. Corbett was a victim of the drink habit and his tendency along this line brought him into many police court affairs.

Dr. A. W. Thornton is a sturdy Irishman and, learning that Corbett was of the same nationality as himself he took a personal interest in him, and undertook to keep a "fatherly" eye upon the unfortunate son of Erin.

A short time ago, when Corbett appeared in the police court, the doctor was largely instrumental in having him admitted to the county house of refuge. Since that time the doctor has kept posted on Corbett's actions, helping him when he was in need of assistance, and now and then giving him kindly advice. As a result of this friendship, Corbett was dubbed, "Thornton's Orphan."

On Sunday afternoon in the opera house the doctor in his temperance speech, referred, without giving the name, to Corbett as a "finished product of the liquor industry." Yesterday morning he was on his way to his office, when he met Chief Holmes, who stopped him and asked—

"Well, Doctor, what are you going to do with your orphan?"

"What has he been doing now?" asked the doctor in return.

Chief Holmes explained that he was becoming a nuisance sleeping at the police station every night, and that the doctor should consider the advisability of sending him to the Central prison, and parted, intending to look into the matter in the near future.

"I was never more surprised in my life," said the doctor in speaking of it this morning. "When I jested yesterday at noon, of his death. It was one of the saddest cases that have come under my attention."

A good respectable Irish family, but his life was completely ruined through drink."

WORLD OF SPORT

FOOTBALL

The Windsor and Essex teams played at Windsor on Saturday, with the result that Windsor won easily by four goals to nil.

This makes Windsor the winner of the Western Division of the league and, if Chatham succeeds in defeating Darrell in the next game the old time opponents, Windsor and Chatham, will have to fight the battle for supremacy.

Windsor has drafted into the team a number of veteran players who showed up strongly in Saturday's game with Essex. The Windsor team on Saturday last will altogether likely be the one that Darrell or Chatham will have to go up against in the finals.

The Windsor team on Saturday was Goal-Love, Backs—Striker and Mienko, Half Backs—Kidd, Thornburn and Brian, R. Wing—Gall, Carmichael, C. m. m.—Lyons, L. Wing—Edmonds, McAlpin.

A full practice of the local club is called for Thursday evening in uniform. Every player should turn out to this practice.

CURLING

Ridgetown, Nov. 17.—At a meeting held last week, the Ridgetown curling and Hockey Association was organized for the purpose of purchasing and controlling the rink. Officers were appointed as follows: President, W. B. Graham; Vice-President, A. White; Secretary-Treasurer, R. B. Hunter; other directors, Dr. D. Marr, W. A. F. Campbell, J. G. Montgomery and Dr. Gray; trustees, R. Reid and J. E. Thayer. The officers were empowered to negotiate for the rink.

SAD EXPERIENCE

Sunday several bank clerks from the city banks went rabbit hunting out in Harwich just beyond the city limits. The dogs started a rabbit and the boys were chasing it when suddenly a skunk was started. The meeting was quite unexpected and one of the figure makers in one of the city banks has reason to regret the meeting between himself and the skunk. The result was thrilling for the young pencil pusher at least. He couldn't get rid of the odor, but hastened home, and by devious ways he sought his boarding house. His friends all deserted him; they couldn't stand it. Even his landlady wanted to turn him out. She finally consented to get him a spare suit, but he was so overcome with the odor that he passed it up. He was wearing a pair of trousers and a shirt when he was found by the police. He was taken to the hospital and died there.

MEETS WITH SUCCESS

Tom Carter, an old Chatham boy, is spending a couple of days with his Chatham friends. Mr. Carter is an ex-C. B. C. student, and was a very popular young man when he was there. It will be remembered that before he left Chatham he met with a serious accident in Hadley's mill, as the result of which he lost three of the fingers of his left hand. This accident was the turning point of Mr. Carter's career. He was forced to give up his trade, cabinet making, and has turned his attention to photography. For the last few years he has been attending college in Effingham, Ill., but has now graduated and is on his way to his former home in Clinton, where he will commence in business. A sample of his work, an enlarged photo of a little girl, finished with blue tint, is on exhibition in McCall's window. It is a very creditable piece of work.

TENDERS

Bulk or separate tenders will be received at the office of the undersigned until Wednesday, Nov. 26th, for the various trades required for the erection and completion of a brick church on the Baldon Road, about 4-1-2 miles from Chatham.

Lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

The object of the Hudson's Bay Company in securing an extra-Provincial license is to enable them to sell certain lands which they hold in the Province of Ontario. This is a somewhat formal proceeding, and adds but little to the many powers given them by Charles, the merry monarch, in 1670.

EUNYAN'S CHAPEL.

Place Where He Preached to Be Destroyed—An Interesting Building in Slum District of South-west.

Among the historic London buildings now marked out for destruction in consequence of their ramshackle condition or the fact that their sites are coveted, there are few more interesting than a dingy, dilapidated little double house hidden away in a narrow street in the centre of the slum district of South-west.

The place differs little in appearance from the other dingy, dilapidated little houses around it, except in having an old-fashioned street lamp overhanging one of its two doors, but it differs from them in its history through having been the chapel where John Bunyan, author of "Pilgrim's Progress," preached.

This is, one-half of the building is given up to Bunyan's old chapel. The other is the place where the preacher and his followers held when other representatives of the crown or of the public with whom the Baptists were unpopular were engaged in hunting them.

To visit this historic little structure involves a long ride on an omnibus down into the East End of London and a good deal of poking about in search of Great Suffolk street—which isn't great in any sense—where the former chapel stands. It is locked with a padlock, the key of which is in the keeping of an old woman who lives in the little shanty opposite.

Long after John Bunyan's time his chapel was turned into a poor mission room, and its walls are now covered with religious texts and faded pictures of Bible scenes. It is all grimy and dingy now, and the floor is covered with litter.

The centre of the old baptistry, where once the converts were immersed, and a sort of gallery stretches all round. It is quite evidently in the last stages of decay, and will not give the "house-breakers" much trouble, but it is rather interesting to stand inside and think how often the author of "The Holy War" and "The Life of Mr. Badman" must have looked on these same walls two and a quarter centuries ago.

Bunyan's connection with the Great Suffolk street chapel began when, after his 12 years' imprisonment for expounding the doctrines of another than the established church, the writer became a licensed preacher. He had been released under the "Declaration of Indulgence," and for a time was un molested, except for the animosity of the anti-Baptists, who frequently descended upon their chapel in force.

At such times the supporters of the new faith, headed by their Bunyan himself, used to scuttle into the adjoining house and wait until the coast was clear.

Three years after the issuance of "declaration of indulgence," however, it was revoked, and the licenses of all Nonconformist ministers were recalled. Bunyan was one of the undaunted preachers who went on holding meetings, and on March 4, 1672, a warrant signed by 13 magistrates and sealed by 10 of them, was issued for his arrest.

He was taken, tried under the Conventicle Act, and sent to prison for six months. It was during this imprisonment, and not, as is generally said, during his previous one of 13 years, that Bunyan wrote the first part of the "Pilgrim's Progress."

The work, when it first appeared, was much shorter than it became afterward, when Bunyan had time to add Mr. Worldly Wiseman, the second meeting with the Evangelist, the talk with Charity at the Palace Beautiful, and the story of Diffidence, the wife of Giant Despair.
