Mainly About People.

High Church stranger who was visiting a rural church in England en-quired: "Have you matins in this church?" "Oh, no, sir," replied the rustic verger, "but we have olicloth fight up to the chancel."

An Argylishire elder was asked how the kirk progressed in his locality. "Ah, weel," said he, "we had four hundred members. Then we had a divession and there were only twa hundred left; then a disruption and only ten left. Then we had a heresy trial; and now there's only me and ma brither Duncan left, and I ha' grave doots o' Duncan's orthodoxy."

The great Mendelssohn was once compelled to accept the office of book-keeper with a banker who was a very ignorant man. A few days after the banker said to Mendelssohn: "Do you think God works things wisely? You He made to be a bookkeeper, and me a rich banker." "Just notice the wis-dom of God," promptly replied Mendels-sohn. "If He had made me the banker, do you think I would engage you for a bookkeeper?"

The story is told that President Roosevelt was once traveling in Idaho, and passed a bookstore in the window of which was a copy of his "Winning of the West." Going into the book-store he enquired, "Who is this author Roosevelt?" "Oh," said the bookseller, Roosevelt?" "Oh," said the bookseller, "ne's a ranch-driver," "And what do you think of his book?" asked the Pre-sident. "Well," said the dealer, slow-ly and deliberately, "I've always thought I'd like to meet the author and tell him that if he had stuck to running a ranch and give up writing books he'd have made a powerful more of a success at his trade."

The chief of the Leslies is said to have prayed before a battle: "Lord, be on our side! An' gin ye canna be on our side, aye lay low a bit, an' ye'll see thae carles get a hidin' that must please ye." An old Covenanter, who ruled his household with a rod of iron, is said to have prayed in all sincerity at family worship: "O Lord, hae a care o' Rab, for he is on the recent description." o' Rab, for he is on the great deep, an' Thou holdest it in the hollow o' Thy hand. An' hae a care o' Jamie, for he hae gone to fight the enemies o' his country, an' the outcome o' the battle is wi' Thee. But ye needna fash Yersel' wi' wee Wully, for I hae him here, an' I am cawpable o' lookin' after him mysel'."

Lord Kelvin, the great British scientist, now in this country, is much given to preoccupation. It is said his students were wont to accompany the endless repetition of the definition of an ideal magnet, "an infinitely long, infinitely thin, uniform, and uniformly and longitudinally magnetized bar," by a stately tramp of feet. At the conclusion of this staggering performance, Professor Thomson, as he then was, would invariably shout, "Silence." One day the boys put it up to keep absolutely still, but the cry of "Silence" came at the end just the same. It is told of him, too, that he once went sound asleep presiding at a banquet. It was the penalty of overwork.

Opie Read, the Southern novelist, who lives in Chicago, has accepted the nomination for alderman from a Reconvention in a Republica ward. Until the last Presidential campaign Mr. Read had always affiliated with the Democracy. During the campaign of 1900, however, he made speeches in the West in behalf of the sound-money ticket. When his bill of expenses went to Mr. Hanna the chairnan noticed that Mr. Read's expenses in Denver were much larger than at any other place. Mr. Hanna called Mr. Read's attention to this. "I reckon as much," Mr. Read replied, "but did you ever play poker in that pesky town?" Mr. Hanna made no answer, but put an "O. K." on the account.

Clerk Newton of the Parker House, Boston, is telling a good story at his own expense. When a small boy on the farm his folks often sent him to the neighbors to buy a dozen eggs when their hens failed to lay enough. He noticed that the old farmer always held each egg before a lighted candle and examined it carefully. In his innocence of Yankee shrewdness, Newton supposed that this was prompted more by honesty and intention to detect whether the eggs were bad or not. One day, however, when he counted his eggs, according to custom, there were only eleven in the basket. With a determination not to be cheated, the lad trudged proudly back to the house, and quickly made known his discovery. "Oh," said the old farmer, "that's all right, my boy; one of them has a double yolk."

Written on the Face.

We write our characters on our faces; yet, though we are quick to read our neighbor's face we are slow to realize that our own is open for him to read. But it is. The story is there, and we are writing it every day of our lives. Not only do smiles and frowns leave traces, but every passion which sways the heart stamps its record upon the face. Even a ride in a street car on a short railway journey gives proof of this. Look around you. Those two strangers opposite you never saw be-fore, yet you know that one is passion ate, the other mean, and your heart ate, the other mean, and your heart warms to the little old lady near by. You want no one to assure you she la kind and gentle, while a whole net-work of wrinkles about the eyes tells you that the old gentleman in the cor-ner loves his joke. Character, indeed, is written plainly on every face. Some speak of tragedy, some of comedy, and not a few give you a distinct warning.

This Heaven-sent prescription is a peerless remedy for your dangerous troubles. Mrs. A. Legault, St. Andre St., Montreal, says— "I would have been a lost woman had I continued six months longer in suffering. Headache, insomnia, nervous prostration and loss of memory made up my troubles, and I feared they would lead to insanity. The doc-tors treated me, but I did not get any better. My friends advised me to try Paines' Celery Compound. The first bottle gave me little relief, but the second began to work miraculously on my nerves. I continued using the compound and after taking nine bottles I can say. I am positively cured.'

Furthermore, sh was handicapped by the fact that she was in house-cleaning attire, with apron and cap, and a feather duster in her right hand. A woman cannot be as dignified and haughtily imperious as she would wish under these circum-

She was so angry that she could cry, and she would have done so if there had been any sort of a reasonable opportunity. "Oh, if I only had a weapon!" she said, hotly. "I'd teach you manners, you big, burly brute—you coward! You knew I was defenceless, or you wouldn't have dared come in! Oh, why is a woman so helpless!" Then, as he advanced again, she suddenly pushed the duster into his face, with the peremptory command:

you clumsy thing! Don't you dare traipse mud into this room!" Now, a feather duster is about as disagreeable a thing as a man can have thrust in his face, and as the intruder jumped back his feet became entangled in the hall rug, and he was flat on his back before he knew what had happened. As he tried to raise himself he got the duster in the face again. He grabbed for it, but she was too quick for him. He needed his hands to get himself up and he needed them to protect his face, and then she made matters worse by suddenly throwing the loose end of the rug over him.

cried. "Wot do you call that thing?" he growled, as he tried to disentangle himself, with the result that every time he took his hands away from his face he got a feather in his eye or a bunch of them in his mouth. Once he closed his teeth on them and thus tried to hold the duster until he could grab it, but she jerked it away, leaving a varied assortment of feathers and parts of feathers in his mouth.
