If all wives were like the one sketched in the ubjoined article, we should not hear of so many tankruptcies, which, to a large extent, are caused by the enormous extravagance of the wives and families of the broken merchants.

THE RIGHT KIND OF A WIFE.

A New York editor says he had an introduction recently to the heroine of the following sketch.

Mr. — , a merchant, now residing in Philadelphia, who formerly lived in rather an extravagual style, was in the habit every Monday morning of giving his wife a certain sum of money for the table and other household expenses of the week; he naver mentioned his business to his wife, and she, deeming him sufficiently capable of attending to his own affairs, never inquired into them. About five years after marriage, through some slight missmanagement, and the rascality of his confidential elerk, Mr. — suddenly broke, and his fall was mentioned "aympathisingly" on 'Change,' and, like all such matters, there the sympathy ended. The merchant kept the affair a secret, and the first intimation his lady had of it was a news paragraph in the Ledger. Shortly after dinner was over, on the discovery of the startling fact, Mrs. — requested her husband to remain in the parlor a few moments, as she had something to say to him. She then left the room hurried up stairs, and shortly after returned, with a splendid bound Bible in her hand. Handing it to her husband she said:

"George the day after our marriage you gave me this preclous book as a token of your love, and as rich fountain to look to in the day of trouble. Its pages have been precious to me; and as your brow looks sad to-day, I now return it to you, that you may glean from it some consolation in the hour of gloon." She then left the room.

The merchant opened the book carelessly, and a bank bill fell out. He picked it up and glanced at its face—it was a $10 bill. He opened the book again, and another note of the same amount was before him. He opened it at the first page, and configurately and and the rout of the first hand of the as a way to receive the company of the professional start is the first page, and considered as well as a professional start of the professional s

He rang the bell—a servant appeared.

"Request your mistress to come to me immediately." said the merchant.

The lady obeyed, entering the room with something between a tear and a smile.

"Kate! Kate? where did you procure all this

"Kate! Kate? where did you procure an inismoney.

"This is the weekly saving of our household expenses for the last five years," was the modest reply. "Every week I put ten out of the twenty dollars which you gave me into our bible bank, that when a day of trouble came upon us, we should have something to save us foom the wolf."

"But why put it in the bible, Kate!"

"Because it is a good bank, one which will not suddenly break," replied the lady.

"You are an angel, Kate," replied the delighted husband, clasping her to his heart.

And so she is. Does any one doubt it.

ONE HUNDRED TONS OF GRASS TO THE ACRE.—A statement was copied from an English paper some time since, setting forth that one hundred tons of grass had been grown in one season from a single acre, on land belonging to the estate of Lord Derby. Many supposed that there must be a mistake in these figures, but a gentleman who visited this estate recently, says: "Four or five crops of the heavy, the state of the state of the season of the Spirits.

The proprietor, in calling the attention of the public to this stout Italian rye grass is not unusual; and Mr. Mechi, of the celebrated Triptree Farm, informed me that he had once grown seven crops during the Summer. This grass grows with great rapidity and luxuriance under the system of irrigation adopted on many of the large estates of England, and particularly by Mr. Mechi, of applying liquid manures. many of the large estates of England, and particularly by Mr. Mechi, of applying liquid manures, and a careful persual of the Almanack, published annually by the proprietor, and to be had graits of any of his Agents, this fact the Valley Farmer says: "The American farmers can hardly form a remote idea of the benefits that are yet to result from science applied to farming. RECREATION IN LABOR.—A New York paper gives us an account of the blending of amusement and instruction with labor, which is both novel and very commendable. Orr, the well known wood engraver, who employs a large number of artists in his line of business, also employs a person to read to them while they are engaged on their various blocks. The programma is, first to read the newspapers; then the current literature of the day; after which the standard works in order. It is stated that the plan is not alone "benevolent," but economical, Mr. Orr finds that the salary paid his reader is more than returned to him in increased quantities as well as superior works. It further puts an end to idle and fruitless discussion, which, a New York paper very philosophically says, 'so often leads to quarrelling.'

Recipe for Growing Big Men.—Recently some wise Frenchman published a learned treatise on the means of getting rid of hideously large corporosities, which, reduced to a point, is nothing but to use animal food, especially lean meat, and indulge in vegetables and in fluids as little as possible. But the greatest discovery of all has been made by Dr. W. Holmes, who tells us that the reason why the human race deteriorates in some regions is the lack of material in the soil to produce bone. He instances New England as net furnishing limestone in sufficient quantities, except in western Vermont, where it is abundant, and where the men grow large in proportion. We copy from an exchange paper the following description of the new theory:
