THOSE WONDERFUL TOUCHES OF COLOR.

What a joy it is to see a grey winter scene to see a group of girls with scarfs and tams and sweaters so gaily colored that one is reminded of a flower garden with giant posies in it. How I do love these touches of bright color and then again she wears a belt of violet velvet and drapes over her shoulders a lovely chiffon scarf shading from blue to violet.

Long May it Wave!

One of the loveliest accessories of this sort, is the feather fan which has recently come back into its own. Long may it wave! If I can ever get my New England conscience to consent to the extravagance I am going to buy one. It will be coral color and the feathers will curl over at the top and it will go with a pale blue and silver dress with a twist of coral and silver ribbons at the high belt. Don't you think that sounds rather nice?

Not Only Colors But Shades. No woman can ever be as attractively dressed as she should unless she understands colors. She ought to know her most becoming colors and to exact shades. There is an old saying which is exceedingly becoming to certain people and there is another, blue, least shade off, which is exceedingly trying to them. And it is the same with all colors. Only experiment and intelligent observation will tell you which is your shade. I made a rule when I got just right shade to keep a piece of that as a sample for future use.

The attractively dressed woman also studies the possibilities of contrast. She will know how to put a bit of bright color can do to her character to a gown. Of course most of us cannot afford to have whole frocks or hats of any one color both because we haven't the clear skinned youthfulness to pull it off and because such a large amount of color becomes tiresome if we have to wear it as steadily as most of us do on hats and frocks. We can, if we will use taste, set off sober colors and hats by a dash of bright color. A single vivid tinge of velvet, a plum, a bit of emerald, a bright hued scarf, a string of beads in a harmonizing color, contrasting color will often be the making of a hat or gown.

One Suit and Three Scarfs. Drawnwork and hemstitching are more popular for trimming than embroidery.

A Curate's Silk Stockings.

The love of a poor Nottinghamshire curate for a certain young woman who could not afford to stop knitting her woolen stockings to listen to his love-making was responsible for the introduction of the stocking-frame.

The curate, whose name was William Lee, immediately set his wits to work to solve the difficulty, and in 1589 he invented the stocking-frame. He removed to London, and Queen Elizabeth saw his ingenious invention, which could also be used, and was used later, for the first time in the manufacture of silk stockings.

The Queen, however, refused to grant this enterprising clergyman a patent for his invention.

She professed too great a love for her subjects who earned their daily bread in the old-fashioned manner of hand-knitting, and concluded her objection by remarking that "to enjoy the exclusive privilege of making stockings for the whole of my subjects is too important to grant to any individual."

Poor Lee was bitterly disappointed, but not altogether disheartened; a few years later he applied his invention for the making of silken hose, whereupon the French Ambassador tempted him to go to Rouen. But in 1610 he returned to England, still disappointed.

Ten years later a miller of Thropton, in North, greatly improved his discovery, and from that time onwards the frame-knitters became more numerous.

And though the weaving of silk stockings was first introduced by Mr. Lee, they were first worn some years earlier in France by Henry II., and in 1580 a pair of hand-knit silk stockings was presented to Queen Elizabeth by Mrs. Montague, her "silk woman," and we are told that the Queen was so pleased with them that from that time onwards she never again wore a pair of cloth hose.

Price Reduction Extraordinary.

In Wednesday's issue of the Evening Advocate under glaring headlines its readers were asked to consider the price reductions in food commodities, made under the "Squires" regime. In a comparative list of prices the Advocate modestly omits to mention that the price of Bologna Sausages has declined to the tune of 5 cents per lb., and that Sugar was reduced from 30 cents to 25 cents. Codfish, too, is another little item that the Advocate forgot to mention. In such items as cooper's lumber, which can't be sold at any price, the mouthpiece of Mr. Cooker is likewise dumb. We wonder will the price of fat be what Mr. Cooker makes it?

Why He Was Acquitted.

Among the many stories of unexpected acquittals, one of the most amusing was told by the late Sir Frank Lockwood against himself. When on circuit, he had been defending a prisoner. Although he had done his best for him, he thought the case was hopeless that he was surprised when the man was acquitted.

On returning to London, Sir Frank saw the man at the railway station. "I strongly advise you to be careful for the future," he said to him. "I am sure I could never get you off again."

"I don't think you could," replied the man. "The fact is, my brother-in-law was foreman of the jury, the last man on the front bench was my cousin, and a man at the back oyes me 250."

Regarding Naval Prize Money.

Dear Sir—I have read with much interest the letters of Mr. Rodgers, ex-Skipper R.N.R., in which he very strongly advocates the paying of the prize money due to the Naval Reservists here in St. John's and the outposts to demand the money which is justly due to us. We have followed in Canada's footsteps in the paying of War Gratuity and other monies, and why not follow her in regard to the paying of the prize money also? Canada has paid her sailors War Gratuity and also has paid them prize money. England has done the same, and why not pay it here in Newfoundland? I would suggest that Mr. Rodgers call a meeting of all ex-Reservists here in St. John's and make the Government come across with the money which is legally ours.

Yours truly, EX-RESERVIST.

AMBITIOUS WIVES.

I've seen some husbands who are with tears who might have learned to sing and dance, had but their wives, the d i m p l e d dears, but given them a decent chance. I'm thinking now of Hiram Hick, who presses hard against the hames, and life's to him a gilded brick because his wife has "social aims." She gives a party every week, or riot of some other kind; and Hiram sees his robes leak; she makes his assets hard to find. A tea to honor Mrs. Jones may be the proper thing to give, but Hiram's sky a hundred bones, and wonders why such females live. His wife must have a costly gown appropriate to each event; and Hiram totters through the town, and smokes a torch that cost a cent. He makes good money every year, and if his wife would mend her ways he well might read his title clear to Easy Street and happy days. But she must trot with richer folk, and mingle with the Upper Ten, and so poor Hiram's always broke and sighing for lost iron men. But in his grief he's not alone; a million husbands toll and spin, and every time they earn a bone their wives go forth to blow it in. A million husbands drudge and slave and toil along on weary feet; and if their wives would help them save, they all might dwell on Easy Street.

Round and cutaway fronts are seen on the new short box coats. A smart turban of tan lisle is trimmed with curled tan ostrich. Dancing frocks of crepe meteor have overblouses of lace to match. Long coats have self-belts or narrow leather belts with buckles. High crush collars are worn with the gay gilets for sports wear. Scarfs of Spanish lace in black, white and coral are very fashionable. Smart coats and separate skirts are made of English sports materials. Afternoon gown of flame color crepe Georgette is embroidered in silver. Narrow suede belts with metal buckles are worn with straight frocks. Crocheted wool flowers trim a hat made of rose-colored braid and taffeta. A street dress of navy blue Poiret twill has inverted pleats of coral tulle taffeta. A new elyze note for afternoon gowns is the low shoulder cut, with short puffed sleeves. Side panels are often finished with silk fringe which hangs below the hem of the dress.

Knotted fringe is being used again, especially for sash-ends. Pleated skirts of crepe de chine are worn with lingerie blouses. Overbodies in skeleton effect are slightly draped on the hips.
