

"I Suffered Terribly With Sore, Aching Back"

Mrs. Roland Ferguson, 194 Lake St., Peterboro, Ont., writes:

"For over two years I suffered terribly with sore back. I was almost mad with the pain, and had doctored with it until I was discouraged. Then my father, who is a firm believer in Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, advised me to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I followed his advice, and am glad to say I was completely relieved of that torturing pain in my back. It is over a year since I used these pills, and I have had no return of the trouble, but always keep them in the house."

A QUEEN UNCROWNED

THE STORY IN THE LONE INN.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Jacquetta and Disbrowe were dumb with surprise.

"Ask this man—her father—if it is not true; and let him deny it if he dare. Lella, you and Norma Macdonald are sisters!"

"I felt it—I knew it. I was sure we were not strangers!" said Jacquetta, in a low, breathless voice.

"This is most wonderful!" exclaimed Disbrowe. "I know, now, why Mr. Macdonald would never speak of Norma's mother. But to think that she and Jacquetta should be sisters! I wonder what Austrey will say?"

"Where is your little daughter, Lella—where is Orrie?" asked the captain, after a pause.

"Here, in London, but not in the house at present. Would you like to see her?"

"Yes; I always liked the little one, somehow. How came she here?"

"Mr. De Vere brought her."

"Mr. De Vere, of Fontelle? Is he here, too?"

"Yes, he and his daughter."

"Ha! his daughter! By the way, that reminds me, I have something to say about that daughter. Thereby hangs a tale." She has appeared in trouble lately—has she not?"

"Trouble!" exclaimed Jacquetta, "she has been like a galvanized corpse for the last two years—dead in life!"

"Ah! just so! Well, I know the cause."

"You!" exclaimed Disbrowe.

"Yes, me; and I can minister to a blind diseased, too. Do you know the cause, my lord?"

"Yes."

"Then she thinks she has married her brother, does she not?"

Jacquetta uttered an exclamation of horror.

"Yes."

"Well, she may get her mind at rest, then; she has done nothing of the kind."

"What!"

"It is true. I give it from Till—old Till, you know, Grizzle's brother—and he ought to know, if any one does."

"Thank Heaven! Poor, unhappy Augusta! But are you sure, Captain Tempest?"

"Certain! Old Till will confirm the story, if you only threaten him with a little hanging!"

"Where is he to be found?"

"At the 'Sailor's Rest,' St. Giles. You'll have no trouble in finding him. You see, old Grizzle knew about the marriage, and trumped up the whole

THE IMPRISONED HEIRESS

THE SPECTRE OF EGREMONT

CHAPTER I.

The Egremonts of Egremont traced their genealogy back to the time of William the Conqueror. That monarch brought in his train a Sir Jasslyn d'Egremont, who, for his distinguished services to his royal master, received an earldom, with suitable estates, and was the founder of the present family bearing his name.

The elder branch of the race, at the recent period of which we write, was represented by a daughter, who had inherited the entire landed and personal property, the title and estates being parted. The former, a barren honor, had descended to the representative of the cadet branch, a gentleman whose whole life had been spent in struggling to "keep up appearances" upon a meager income, and whose misery was completed by the inheritance of a lofty title without means adequate to its proper support.

This unenviable position, however, was of brief duration.

The preceding earl had had the misfortune to lose his wife a few weeks after the birth of their only child, and had himself succumbed within the ensuing twelvemonth to a prevalent disease, to which his melancholy rendered him the more readily a prey.

Their child, the heiress to whom we have alluded, had been left to the guardianship of the present earl, her nearest paternal relative, her fortune being placed in other hands. A handsome sum was assigned for her support in suitable style, and this fund it was that enabled the present bearer of the family title to keep up the dignity of his rank.

To insure the youthful heiress the tenderest care at the hands of her relatives, her father had the forethought to devise a will leaving her fortune to the son of an old friend, should she die unmarried before attaining her majority. Thus, the strongest possible inducements were held out to her guardian and his wife to cherish her more than themselves, since, if she were to die, they must inevitably return to their former obscurity and scanty income.

The home appointed for the heiress, until such time as she should be presented at court, was the estate of Egremont, and here, surrounded by a small cortege consisting of her relatives, a sufficient number of instructors, and a numerous retinue of servants, the Lady Aletia passed her infancy, childhood, and early youth.

She was flattered and caressed by every one from her guardian down to the lowest menial that was permitted to enter her presence. She had but to express a wish and the earl hastened to gratify it, even at the expense of considerable personal inconvenience.

But a single wish to the heiress remained ungratified.

She had longings for society which her relatives had sedulously striven to repress, and which they had taken care not to gratify, keeping her secluded under plea of her youth. She had travelled a few months in company with her guardian, but she knew nothing of balls and gay assemblies, save what she had learned from books, and her world was made up of the simple events that occurred at Egremont.

Egremont was situated upon the wildest part of the Scottish coast, and comprised parks, woods, plantations, and fields, besides pleasure-grounds of great beauty and extent.

The mansion was situated upon a bold cliff that rose abruptly from the sea, which chafed and dashed against its base with sullen but vain fury. There was a flight of steps cut in the solid rock, leading from a narrow ledge below, that served as a boat-landing to a private door in the dwelling above.

The sun was sloping toward the west one December day, when the owner of the Egremont estate issued from a private door of the mansion, and took her way along the cliff, dangerously near its edge.

There was no fear in her glance as she looked down upon the boiling flood fretting itself against the base of the rock.

She is Willing to Answer Letters From Women Asking About Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Halifax, Nova Scotia.—"I am a maternity nurse and have recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to many women who were childless, also to women who need a good tonic. I am English and my husband is American, and he told me of Lydia E. Pinkham while in England. I would appreciate a copy or two of your little books on women's ailments. I have one which I keep to lend. I will willingly answer letters from any woman asking about the Vegetable Compound.—Mrs. H. COLMAN, 24 Uniscoe Street, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Could Not Sleep Nights
Dublin, Ont.—"I was weak and irregular, with pains and headaches, and could not sleep nights. I learned about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound by reading the letters in the newspapers and tried it because I wanted to get better. I have got good results from it and I feel a lot stronger and am not troubled with such bad headaches as I used to be and am more regular. I am gaining in weight all the time and I tell my friends what kind of medicine I am taking. You may use my letter as a help to others."—Mrs. JAMES KACHO, Box 12, Dublin, Ontario.

English Nurses

ANXIOUS TO SERVE IN LEPER COLONY

London. (A.P.)—Application by two young professional women for opportunity to enlist through the Dominican Priory, at Hampstead, as nurses to lepers, draws attention to the fact that English women have never hesitated to make the sacrifice which this particular form of service entails.

The superiors of the London headquarters of the Franciscan Missionaries of Mary states that when the mother-general appealed some years ago for six nuns to nurse lepers, more than 1,000 volunteers, all members of the Order, responded.

"To-day we have 4,000 members engaged in missionary work all over the world," said the mother superior. "If an appeal were made for workers in leper colonies almost all our 4,000 would be eager to go.

"As a matter of experience nearly all the girls who wish to join the Order—and their average age is between 20 and 24—say that they are anxious to give their lives to the service of the lepers. As we have educational and charitable undertakings in all parts of the world and as we teach in many parts of the Empire, we cannot promise them all that they shall nurse lepers."

It is an extraordinary fact, attributed by the devout sisters to the special care of Divine Providence, that not one of their order has ever contracted leprosy.

Death Takes Heavy Toll of Pilgrims to Mecca

BATAVIA, Dutch East Indies, Sept. 48 (A.P.)—Of 50,000 Dutch Indian Mohammedans who made the pilgrimage to Mecca this year, about 5,000 have died on the way back from disease and exhaustion consequent upon the hardships of travel in visiting the holy places of Islam. Moslems believe that by these visits they will gain sanctity here and paradise hereafter.

The death rate of this year's pilgrimage has been higher than usual, and is attributed to so many of the pilgrims being aged and infirm.
