Perhaps this musty air of the old barn has affected my head. And yet I don't think I could have mistaken that voice, - Besides," he cried, suddenly standing erect, "he turned out the light! Why should he do that, except to prevent my seeing him? And I did see him, in spite of his grimaces and and it was he-it was William, the man who has ruined me body and soul, the man who has fawned upon me and humored me, and wriggled himself in-I know I was a fool," said he, excitedly, staring straight at the wall in front of him, and bringing out his strong voice in a deep thunder of anger and self-contempt. "I was a weak, miserable fool. But it takes a knave to make such a fool as that man made f me. And I tell you I will have him; I won't be cheated of my revenge now. Let me go, I say—let me go!"

"Now," said she, not resuming her seat, but standing before him with one hand on the bureau, and speaking very earnestly, "if Lindley should prove to be the man you suspect, you will have my fullest sympathy and all the help I can give you toward such just punishment as may be in our power. But there is quite another motive he may have had for not wishing you to see him, and I fancy it was the suspicious action of overturning the lamp which led you to mistake him for the man you have so much reason to dislike. Lindley, as I told you, has been plotting to get your uncle to leave the property to a person of his choosing; would never have dared to do this has naturally disconcerted him."

"But not to such an extent as to lead him to do anything hopelessly foolish," said James, looking up at her with more shrewdness in his blue eyes than the had expected. "I know this man Lindley—Williams—whatever his name is. He is as clever as he can stick. If it had been a mere matter of getting an unjust will made, he would have faced it out. It wanted the fear of a pair of hands at his throat to make im raise such a scene as that which took place in the drawing-room just now. You need not be afraid of his influence over my uncle any longer; while I am at the hall he will keep at a safe distance, I'll answer for it." tainty that she began to recognize the ikelihood of Lindley's plots to get the affairs of the family into his own hands having been more deeply laid than she had suspected. Of course, since James had been in prison when the news came of Lindley's charitable visit to him, they had heard only one side of the story. They had sent no word, no message of sympathy or sorrow to the young man in his misery or degradation, except through Sir Charles' so-licitor, Mr. Massey; and James had sent no word back; therefore the

Did you imagine your welfare—you, the only remaining representative of youth and hope in our decaying family—could be a mat-ter of indifference to us?" He did look down at her then, but it vas with a rather cynical expression. However, she went on, undaunted:

"When you disappeared from us so cruelly, without one word, one hint of what you were going to do, we were frantic with anxlety about you; we made inquiries, we searched, we did everything we could to obtain tidings of you. It was a most unfeeling thing for you to do."

There was truth in all this, and James knew it; though, indeed, want of feeling was far from having been the cause of his disappearance. "Yes, yes, I know it was wrong-I know it was," he said, restlessly. "But you can't imagine how intolerable the thought of entering the church had become to me; even now, I give you my word, I am inclined to think I did better than that." Elizabeth had certainly taken in her nephew when he had outgrown the need of it. But a man down-broken as James now was could not be just.

We were overwhelmed when we heard of it—I most of all." "When you heard of it!" he echoed, turning to look at her. "What aid you hear? How did you hear?"
"We heard all about it, of course, in half a dozen ways—Mr. Massey—the newspapers. You surely did not imagine we never heard of it?"

"Was it in the newspapers? I thought, being out of the country—Well, at any rate, you may congratulate yourself that it was not a hang-ing matter; for myself, I give you my word I would rather it had been.".
"Hush, hush, James; don't talk like that! Had Lindley—had that man for whom you have taken Lindley anything to do with-that?'

"Why, of course he had," said James, turning upon her with vehemence, "He he who took her away from me, he that man who had called himself m; friend, who had lived upon me, le me away, done what he liked with me He has been the curse of my life, and some day—some day I'll have it out with him yet. He may skulk and hide and creep out of my way, and dodg me and escape me as a fox does the hounds; but I'll hunt him down as last; and then I'll show him no mercy if he begs for his life on his knees!' The fixed stare in front of him with which he spoke, as if his eyes actually saw himself in the act of taking a sanguinary revenge, alarmed his aunt much more than his words or the low savage tones of his voice. She had forgotten until the words, "It was he who took her away," recalled the fact to her mind that there had been a woman concerned in the murder, not very creditably to James. The young man, after his angry outburst, seemed to be anxious to recollect his reserve. This was just what she wished to prevent. She said, in her softest voice: "You were very fond of her?"

"Yes," answered he, briefly; and he passed his hand impatiently over his head as if to intimate that he wished passed his hand impatiently over his head, as if to intimate that he wished to shake himself free of the subject. "I should like to see my uncle; can I see him now?" he asked, in a different

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done more to alleviate suffering than any other medicine yet discovered. They have effected cures in hundreds of cases pronounced incurable by physi-icans, and they have brought rejoicing into the homes of thousands through-out the Dominion. Among those who speak of this wonderful medicine in terms of gratitude is Mr. Lemuel Mc-Cready, of Shannon, N. B. He says: A year ago I was taken with a pain in my hip, which gradually worked down to the knee, where it settled. At first I thought it an attack of rheumaordinarily used for that trouble, but with no benefit. The knee began to swell and the pain became excruciating. IT IS THE TRUTH.

A Brantford Lady Tells How She Was Cured. Mrs. George Lemon, 131 Erie-avenue, Brantford, Ont., says: For a number of years I was greatly troubled with what the doctors called spasms of the heart. In fact I was in a terrible state. My heart pained me greatly, and fluttered continually. I could hardly get my breath at times. As a consequence I lost weight, and had no appetite. However, as soon as I started using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills I experienced prompt relief, and am now better than I have been for years.

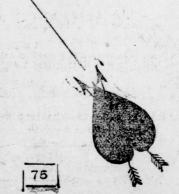

When I commenced taking these wonders. When I commenced taking these wonderful pills I weighed only 125 pounds; now I weigh 149 pounds. I can heartily recommend the pills to all who suffer from any heart or nerve trouble, for they have cured me of all the distressing complaints from which I suffered for such a long time.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills may be obtained from any druggist. Price 30 cents per box, or three boxes for $1.50.

Messrs. T. Milburn & Co., Toronto, Ont:
Gentlemen, —I have been physically weak for over two years my blood very thin and seeming to lack vitality, i felt weary and unrested nearly all the time and suffered greatly from complete nervous prostration.
My nervous troubles brought on palpitation and irregular action of the heart, and I suffered greatly from coldness of the hands and feet. Sometimes my hands and feet felt as if they were frozen. Nervous headaches and dizziness also caused me great distress. Seven weeks ago I got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills from Mr. E. C. Harvey's drug store, and since taking them have gained steadily in strength. My blood has become richer and circulates more freely. These pills have strengthened my heart and nervous system and banished the ills from which I suffered.
I feel completely invigorated and built up, and can say that in my case they have acted as a splendid restorative, so much so that I can recommend them to any one suffering from beart or nerve trouble as I did. (Sgd.) MRS. M. PIERCE.
