BASEBALL. A PHENOMENAL GAME.

ing Events.

If you meet a man with a sore throat today it's a pretty safe surmise that he was at yesterday's ball game. There have been more people at Tecumseh Park this year, but not half so much noise. Such a ball match ! has not been witnessed on the historic | foul flys. grounds since the palmy days of Goldsmith and Powers, when the whole population used to flock there. prises and climaxes that sent the crowd nearly into hysterics. They say the cheering that startled the calm evening air could be heard in the remotest part of the city. The game smashed the Canadian time record this year. It lasted three hours and five minutes, ending at 7:10. The people forgot all about supper; they were filled with so much excitement that hunger was driven out. There were perhaps 300 of them in the stands, while nearly 1,000 deadheads had congregated on the hill opposite the court house, on the corner of Maple and Ridout streets, on every adjoining house-top, on telephone poles and in trees, and wagons outside. It was Connolly who snatched vic-tory away from the Hams in the eleventh, and after the crowd had givwas the awful shock it gave the visitors, who had already begun to pack up their duds and were crowing loudly at the grand stand.

"Three weak men at bat!" yelled Hi-Yu Roberts to Cochrane, as the Londons started their half of the inning. Hynd flied out to right and Hi-Yu's classic mouth stretched from ear to ear. It closed again when Johnston made a single over Laur's head. Then Ward hit a hot one to Dean, who tried to cut off Johnston, but dropped the ball. "Now, Doc!" shouted the grand stand, as Sippi came to bat. Doc responded with a sacri-

The decree also stated that "lack of air, lack of room to walk and shoot, tc., arose out of too crowded a ity." But it was impossible to stem he increasing tide of population. The mly result was to cause overcrowding, which proved a still greater evil than over-population, and led up to the horrors of the plague year. Even

A train at Wimbledon was just starting for London when a young house woman reached the station and simply had time to jump into the first compartment she reached and flop down on the cushioned seat. "Only then," she writes, "did I observe that granted in the year 1197. A committee is being formed by the citizens ment, however, I did not feel in the of Limerick to celebrate the occasion in a fitting manner.

Slightest degree nervous, and commenced to read a paper. After the train had passed one station I happened to glance toward one end of the carriage. I observed the man to be greatly agitated, and gazing in-tently in my direction. Then he got on his feet. A sudden, overwhelmin fear took possession of me. He wa murderer, I was certain. I thought of shrieking for help, but my tongue refused to move. The monster—for so he seemed to me—looked anxiously about him, apparently to make sure without. Then he came quite close to hand in his overcoat pocket. Was it a revolver he had, or a knife, or a pestle, or what? Springing to my feet I faced him in despair. 'What do you mean?' I cried, half fainting, as He bent toward me, smiled rimly, and said: 'Excuse me, madam offer you ten thousand apologies if have alarmed you. Such a thing was the furthest removed from my thoughts. The fact is, I have to alight at the next station, and since
