The English Fair Forsaken.

The scene of the Old English Fair was descreted to-day except that a number of lady participants were busily engaged removing their effects. Until after the meeting of the board on Thursday next, at which time the exact amount of the general receipts will be ascertained, all the booths will remain undisturbed. Maiss Priddis, secretary of the fair, was seen, and she was jubilant. Although the returns had not yet been made, she was confident that the amount predicted by her—$1,500—had been secured. The Young Liberais' entertainment alone had netted the management somewhat over $60. The floral committee, composed of Mesdames M. J. Kent, Labatt, De la Hooke and Ward, had also been exceptionally successful in its efforts. The Gray Friars' Playhouse brought over $100 to the good cause.
