This view of it seemed shared by the members of the finance committee, to whom the mayor's letter was referred, who, at the meeting held yesterday spoke only of that line. They, too, were apparently of the opinion that the mayor had acted before learning the exact situation, and decided to take no further notice of it until it is known in what degree the railway company is at fault in these accidents, and whether or not the proper precautions are taken to prevent them. In speaking of the matter today Mr. Whittenberger, trainmaster on the Grand Trunk, said that the mayor, nor no one else, could be more anxious than are the authorities here, to prevent any and all accidents at crossings; and, immediately affected by these acci-

The Christie-Douglass proposition the care taken to protect life at local for the acquisition of a portion of Park avenue, which came before the members of the finance committee yesterday afternoon, and was laid over, has been shelved at so many meetings learn what are the facts. They looked that Ald. Douglass was asked today if upon his communication as referring it was the intention of the promoters of the deal to let it quietly drop from sight. He said that this was by no means their intention. Those who are interested in this scheme to secure the valuable property fronting the park do not intend to allow such a seductive idea to fail of development simply for want of persistence. They are waiting to see what the city solicitor says regarding the legality of the city council's action in permitting the people whose property fronts on the south side of York street, between Burwell and Colborne streets, to use a strip of land within the sidewalk. This must necessarily be the precedent which will guide their action in regard to Park avenue. The prime movers in this Park avenue deal still realize the splendid possibilities, from a housebuilder's viewpoint, of this thoroughfare, and resolutely shut their ears to he added that, apart from the persons the argument of those who oppose their proposal, that the narrowing of dents, no one lamented them more than the street in the way they suggest the Grand Trunk. It has been made plain, also, that the owners of the property which would thus depreciate in value would come upon the city for the loss which they would sustain. The bridge itself would be very expensive and the return for its construction would be a trifling convenience of avoiding a detour of one block either way, and a probable increase in the value of northern Wellington street real estate. Notwithstanding these drawbacks, the assurance was given The Advertiser today that the scheme had not been abandoned, that it would soon be brought forward again. Another and more attractive plan has been suggested-to secure the co-operation of the C. P. R. and connect the street by means of dividing the C. P. R. freight sheds, and building a crossing there. If this were agreed to It would mean that in return the C. P. R. would be freed from the agreement by which they are bound to give some $16,000 towards the construction of

A talk with several leading retail merchants indicates the existence of a strong desire on the part of business men that Victoria Day be celebrated on Monday, May 26, instead of on Sat-urday, May 24. The merchants want the Saturday market trade, and the observance of a holiday on that day means a great inconvenience to the farmers, and considerable monetary or to loss to the dealers. It is probable that the city council will be asked to fix Monday as "the day we celebrate."
