Preliminary Hearing of the Troubles Over the Goldstream Quartz Ledges.

Captain McCallum Gives a Graphic Description of His Row With the Accused.

The preliminary hearing of the charge tracted a great deal of interest, the crowd of spectators being unusually large.

Went to the door, and when Lawrence pushed him back he made for the window. Lawrence followed troductory remarks. Mr. Bodwell trial. At a preliminary hearing evidence was heard for the purpose of finding out what charge, if any, lay against the accused, whereas in a trial only the specific indictment could be inquired into. These all came from the Ophir mine and were to be used by Lawrence in selling the property in London. Witness next told of his meeting Lawrence in August, when the accused was ed till to-day at 2:30. driving in from Goldstream. The accused had then told him he had something so good in the way of quartz claims at Goldstream that he intended to work the property instead of going to London about the Ophir mine. The witness next proceeded to give a graphic description of the row at Mr. Lawrence's house. He called to see Mr. Lawrence on October 1, he explained, and on his way stepped in at the bank and found that the note for $750 he had given Mr. Lawrence on the sale, and which the latter had promised not to use at once, had been discounted the very day it was made. When he entered the accused's house he asked if Mr. Lawrence had still the note, and Mr. Lawrence replied in the affirmative. Then witness asked to see it, and Lawrence after going out of the room for a time returned and said his papers were in such confusion that he could not find it. Asked if the note had been discounted Lawrence said: "You don't suppose I would lie in the matter when I promised not to dis-

BIBLE WINES.

The lecture delivered by Rev. Dr. Lucas at Calvary Baptist church last night was not, perhaps, quite so popular in its character as the others of his course. The subject was the "Wines of the Bible," and was directed towards a refutation of arguments that the Bible sanctioned the use of intoxicants. In the first place the lecturer strove to show that it would not be consistent for the Bible in one place to commend the use of an intoxicant and in another place to condemn it. Wine was spoken of as the product of the grape, and wine could be perfectly non-alcoholic if properly made. The speaker in alluding to the scriptural saywine could

M. R. Luther, one of the owners of the King Solomon and Mount Vernon claims, is in Spokane forming a com pany to work these properties. The chief difficulty to overcome in this work will be the draining of Loon Lake. An attempt to drain the lake with a siphon was not successful, and it is now proposed to tap it with a tunnel. An attempt will also be made to consolidate the Lady of the Lake and other claims in one group.

Though there has been very little noise about it, considerable work has been done upon the Ainsworth properties this summer, and several are in shape to ship when the market advances. A. W. McCune, of Salt Lake, is one of the heaviest holders. It is said that he owns seventeen claims, but as he has made no pretence to work any save the Skyline, the progress of the camp has been slow. During the past summer, however, several new companies have taken hold of Ainsworth New Westminster, Oct. 28. — The properties, and are engaged in developing them, which in a measure compen-
