BACK TO THE FARM.

[EVEN THO' WHEAT IS SIXTY CENTS A BUSHEL.]

Yes, mother, I'm back to the farm an' back this time to stay, Seems like a dozen years sence the day I went away; Phough the brindle calf that was born just afore I quit the plough Hain't growed ter be much more nor a sizable heifer now.

Hungry? Why that don't begin fer tell ye the way I teel, More nor a month, begosh, sence I had a good square meal; Gimme some fried fat pork an' a cup of good green tea-No, I don't want nothin' better-that's quite good enough fur me.

Not quite so fresh as I was when I kicked at your country grub, Wonder dad hadn't pounded some sense iuto me with a club; Charity breakfasts has done it, an' starvin', freezin' days, 'An' I ain't makin' no more fun of country feed an' ways.

Where's my trunk? Well, my baggage has somehow gone astray, They give no checks on the freight trains-I had to travel that way; Stole a ride from the Junction, and so I traveled light-My trunk's at the pawn-shop, mother, with everything else in sight.

Why, the city is one big pawn-shop, where everybody's in debt, Where everything costs like thunder and money is hard to get; And the fortunes we used to read of are mostly paper, ye know, It's either show an' starvation or starvation without no show.

It's durned hard times in the city-the hardest I ever see-An' thousands of strong young fellers are much wuss off nor me; Not havin' no home to go to ter stan' between them and harm, They kain't do the Prodigal Son act an' dig out back to the farm.

Not as I've blowed myself in in a way that should bring me to shame, Boozin' or knockin' around ter git myself a hard name; Never done more in that line nor sometimes take a drink with a friend, An' squander a quarter or so, jest so I could hold up my end.

But it's jest that the bottom's dropped out and they's no more work to be had; Ye may tramp from daylight till dark, ye may want a job so bad That ye offer to work for your board. Ye may go on yer knees an' pray For a chance to clean the streets in vain in the city to-day.

It would break your heart to see the crowds that are hanging about In the cold an' slush of the streets to wait till the paper's out, An' pay for the sheet fresh issued what's maybe the last red cent Fur jest one chance in a hundred from some new advertisement.

Why didn't I write for money? I reckon I'd too much grit, I'd set out to make my fortune an' was bound I wouldn't quit, Nor own myself sech a doggoned chump, after puttin' on sech frills, As ter come on dad fur the long stuff to settle my boardin' bills.

Well, I toughed it as long's I could, but I didn't git no show, An' the boardin' missis shut down an' I hadn't no place to go; My clothes was mostly in hock-'twas hard to git bite or sup, So Thursday I took a tumble an' jest throwed the durn thing up.

"Ain't I a idiot?" thinks I, "to be tryin' to live upon air, Where nobody wants me around an' there's nothin' to do anywhere, When dad is a slaving to death an' hirin' help on the farm, Where there's always plenty of work for a man with a strong right arm.

"It ain't a very soft snap-no nine-to-five-o'clock day, An' board an' clothes ain't much when ye come to reckon the pay; There ain't a heap of chances to make a millionaire's pile, But it's better than huntin' a job an' findin' yerself all the while.

FOR SALE OR TO LET-THIRTEEN

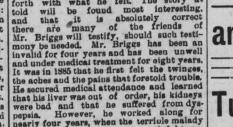

An' so I've got back to the farm-no more city life-not for me, Jest reach me some more of that pork-an' I'll take half a cup more of tea; Ain't had sech a meal dear knows when-an' to-morrow about four o'clock I'll turn out as I used years ago an' help dad to attend to the stock. PHILLIPS THOMPSON.
