Montreal, November 12th, 1891.

Sir William Dawson read a report on Agriculture, which was received and adopted. The recommendations contained therein were summed up as follows:—

"1. The extension of the Course of Agriculture in the Normal School and provision for training special teachers.

"2. The preparation of a text-book or text-books suited to this Province.

"3. Pecuniary aid to schools efficiently teaching Agriculture, for the purchase of apparatus and by way of bonus.

"4. Arrangements for introducing the subject of Agriculture into the regular course of study, in such a manner as to meet the wants of country and city schools.

"Your Sub-Committee would ask the general approval of Committee to the above suggestions and its permission to confer with the Honorable the Superintendent of Education and the Principal of the Normal School as to the means of carrying them out, and to report the necessary regulations and arrangements at next meeting of the Committee. All of which is respectfully submitted."

In the discussion that preceded the adoption of the report it was agreed that, if possible, itinerant lecturers should be secured to give scientific instruction in Agriculture in different parts of the Province during the winter months.
