

Business of the House

Mr. Rowe: Is he afraid to dissolve parliament? Why not do it yourself?—you are doing everything else yourself.

Mr. Martin: You have delayed things for three weeks. You led it, too. Don't say a word.

Mr. Fleming: Mr. Speaker, it should be placed on the record that when an hon. member rose on a question of privilege you sat down and refused to hear him and the Liberals instigated such an outburst of disorder that no one could be heard. That ought to be on the record. This is the lowest moment in Canadian parliamentary history; the lowest moment. There has never been anything like it.

Mr. Pearson: I thought that was last night.

Mr. Bell: This is black Friday, boy.

Mr. Lesage: You brought it on; you did it yourself.

Mr. Fleming: How absurd can you get?

Mr. Martin: The minority is not running this parliament.

Mr. Rowe: The majority isn't running it either; nobody is running it. The majority cannot run it, let alone the minority.

Mr. Hodgson: Hitlerism.

Some hon. Members:

There will always be a pipe line,
The pipe line shall be free;
The gas shall flow from west to east in each locality.

There'll always be a pipe line,
The pipe line shall be free—

Mr. Fleming: Not parliament.

Some hon. Members:

—for Fulton means no more to you than Fulton means to me.

There'll always be a pipe line, the pipe line
shall be free—

Mr. Fleming: Free to American investors.

Some hon. Members:

I've been working on the pipe line all the
day through,

I've been working on the pipe line just to make the Tories blue.

Can't you hear the Tories moaning, getting up so early in the morn';

Hear the C.C.F.'ers groaning, for the pipe
line's getting warm.

Mr. Rowe: He laughs best who laughs last;
go to the country and find out.

An hon. Member: You laughed yourself.

Mr. Rowe: No, I am ashamed of you; that is why I cannot laugh.

The house divided on the question: Shall the course of action submitted by Mr. Speaker be followed? And the question was decided in the affirmative on the following division:

YEAS
