for the six months of 1880, just expired. The figures compare very favorably with those for the corresponding period in 1879, and indicate plainly enough that the tide of commercial prosperity in that country has been too strong to be noticeably affected by the eddies of reaction which took place during the spring, however threatening they may have appeared at the time. The number of failures for the period named in 1880 was 2,497, and the aggregate of liabilities, $32,888,763. In 1879, the liabilities for a like period were 65 millions, and in 1878, 130 millions. The record for this year is an extraordinarily good one in the annals of the

A FREDERICTON, N.B., "fly fisherman" writes that in his opinion the present system of appointing fishery wardens and overseers is most objectionable. He says: "The department generally appoints as warden some farmer or other person along the river who has a good deal of local influence, and can be made politically useful. He has in most instances a number of relatives and friends living around him, and they fish as they please. I am credibly informed that on the South West Miramichi it is by no means unusual for salmon nets to be set directly across the whole river, these being in many instances backed by Gaspereaux nets, so that if a salmon or grilse escapes the first net he must bring up at the second. The movements of the warden are known all over the neighborhood, and should he take an occasional trip on the river everything is carefully prepared for his inspection. The settlers on the Miramichi in York County complain bitterly that whereas a few years ago they could take 40 to 50 fish in a night, they now rarely get one. Almost every salmon taken with a fly on the upper waters bears the mark of the net."
