

4th of June, so that we were disappointed in our design of dressing the ships, and obliged to content ourselves with firing one hundred and twenty guns, in honour of his Majesty's birth-day, and celebrating it, in other respects, in the most manner we could. Port, who, on account of his skill in languages, was left with us, partook, as well as the sergeant, (in the capacity of commandant of the place) of the entertainment of the day. The worthy priest of Para-tounca, having been informed that it was the anniversary of our sovereign's birth, gave likewise a sumptuous feast, at which several of our gentlemen were present, who were highly pleased with their entertainment, of which dancing formed a part.

On Sunday the 5th twenty head of cattle arrived, having been sent us, by the directions of the commander, from the Verchnei ostrog, which stands on the river Kamtschatka, at the distance of almost a hundred miles from this place. These cattle were of a moderate size; and though the Kamtschadals had been seventeen days in driving them down to the harbour, were in good condition when they arrived. The four succeeding days were employed in making preparations for putting to sea; and, on Friday the 12th, about two o'clock in the morning, we began to unmoor. Before, however, we had got up one anchor, so violent a gale sprung up from the northeast, that we thought proper to moor again, supposing, from the position of the entrance of the bay, that the current of wind would, in all probability, set up the channel. The pinnace was dispatched to examine the passage, and returned with intelligence, that the wind blew violently from the southeast, with a great swell setting into
