near the coast of the Morea, 37 miles SE of the island of Cephalonia. It is 24 rolles long and 12 broad, and very fertile. Its i principal riches confist in currants. which are uncultivated in a large plain, under the shelter of mountains, which gives the fun greater power to bring them to maturity Here are also the finest peaches in the world, each of which weighs eight or ten ounces: also excellent figs and oil. In short, it would be a perfect paradife if wood were not so dear, though this island was formerly full of forests. The native speak both Greek and Italian, though there are very few Roman Catholic, among them; but they have a bishop as well as the Greeks. This place has no fortifications, but there is a fortress upon an eminence planted with cannon. In one part of this island is a place which shakes when trod upon, like a quagmire; and a fpring which throws out a great deal of bitumen, especially at the time of an earthquake. It serves instead of pitch, to pay the bottoms of the ships, and about 100 barrels in a year are used for this purpose. This island belongs to the Venetians, who have constantly a governor residing in the fortress. There are about 50 villages, but no other large town than Zante, which is feated on the E fide of the island, and has a good harbour. It contains near 20,000 inhabin tants; and the houses are low, on account of the frequent carthquakes. The English and Dutch have each a factory and conful here. Lon, ax 3 E. lat. 37 53 N.

ZARA, a strong city of Venetian Dalmatia, capital of a county of the same name, with an archbishop's see, a citadel, and a harbour. It was formerly much more considerable, the circumference of the walls being now but two miles, and the inhabitants not above 6000. Near the church, which the Greeks call St. Helia, are two fluted columns of the Corinthian order, supposed to have been part of the temple of Juno. There are fine paintings in the churches, done by the best masters; and they pretend to have the body of St. Simon, brought from Judea, and kept in a shrine, with a crystal before it. Zara is feated on a small peninsula, in the gulf of Venice, 80 miles SW of Jaicea, and 130 SE of Vonice. Lon. 16 6 E, lat. 44
