Philadelphia, Dec. 7, 1839.

SIR,—I attended, a few days since, your Lectures in this city, "On the Discovery by the Northmen," and derived very great pleasure from the same.

Being, by birth, a Northman, and having, for some years, studied many of the old Icelandic documents concerning this interesting subject, I hesitate not to say that your lecture is compiled with much care and labor, and can not but be interesting and instructive to all persons.

Your obedient servant,

C. D. ARFWEDSON, U. S. Consul at Stockholm.

From Mrs. Willard, of Troy.

Mr. Davis has delivered an interesting and instructive Lecture relating to the history of our country, to members of the Troy Female Seminary.

From the Boston Daily Advertiser, Oct. 16.

The Lectures now being delivered in this city, by the Rev. A. Davis, on "The Discovery of the American Continent by the Northmen," and on "The Ruins of Central America," are exceedingly interesting. I had the pleasure, last evening, of being an auditor of the first Lecture, and was, in common with many others, highly gratified. I trust that Mr. Davis may meet with that success which he deserves. He has evidently bestowed great labor and investigation upon this interesting subject, of which he has made himself perfectly master. Those who attend Mr. Davis' Lectures, will find themselves well repaid for the time they may spend, by the instruction and pleasure which they can not fail to receive. C.

From Professor Dean, and John Van Buren, Esq.

I have read with much pleasure, the Rev. Mr. Davis' printed Lecture on the subject of the Ruins and the Discoveries of the Northmen on this Continent. The subject itself is possessed of much interest, and in the Lecture much research is evidenced, and the whole treated in a very attractive manner.

ALBANY, MARCH 31, 1842.

AMOS DEAN.
