The Clean-Up Deal.

Co cerning the clean-up deal Mr. Mc-Bride said he did not believe the citizens would approve of the turning over to the Hydro commission of a right-of-way on the Kingston road. He never would vote for it, either as a citizen or a member of council.

Mr. McBride took all the credit for having the question of constructing Mayor Church made it plain that he desired to be returned to the mayor's chair in order to wind up the acquirement of the city of the private power and radial interests, and also the purchase of the T.S.R. next fall. He was not an office-seeker from personal choice, but felt in duty bound to stay on the job until these various transactions have been carried thru.

Regarding the clean-up, Controller Ramsden said it meant one fare all over the city, plenty of power for the operation of the street railway, and avoidance of the duplication of the light and power system. He gave the board of control credits for turning a deficit on the abatteir into a surplus. He suggested that the time had come to regulate the cold storage. He also, as usual, devoted some attention to The Toronto late the cold storage. He also, as usual, devoted some attention to The Toronto World, claiming that it had misrepresented his attitude on public questions.

Controller Gibbons again denied the rumor that he had the refusal of an $9000 job. He did not believe in stinting the school board; education was the best kind of an investment, but he did not believe in spending money foolishly.

Faith in Hydro Movement.

Controller Maguire recalled that faith snown by the pioneers in the Hydro movement, and their prediction that it would not cost the citizens a cent, but would carry itself from the first, had been fulfilled. These men were now predicting that the properties now about to been fulfilled. These men were now pre-dicting that the properties now about to be taken over by the Hydro and the city would carry themselves, would also be cuffilled. The consummation of the big clean-up deal would make Toronto a partner in the biggest electric develop-ment scheme in the world. The city of Toronto, said the controller, could pay the entire debt of one hundred million dellars by the sale of its power and elec-tric railway franchises, if it cared to do se.

Other speakers were: Ald. F. M. Johnston, Controller Gibbons, Ald. Plewman, Mrs. Ald. Hamilton, Gordon Collins, Aid. Burgess and Mrs. Frawley.
