GRANDSON OF FIRST NAPOLEON EVICTED

Rag-picker Fails to Pay His Ground Rent and is Dispossessed.

Paris, March 22.—Louis Napoleon Masson, a rag-picker who claims to be the grandson of the first Napoleon and who for years has occupied a tumble-down shack just outside of Paris, has been dispossessed for failing to pay ground rent for an abandoned quarry which he claimed he owned under a squatter's rights.

With tears in his eyes, but with haughty dignity, Louis Napoleon Eugene Maximilian Masson, as he is registered in the official records, placed his hand on his chest in a traditional Napoleonic gesture and defied the bailiff to touch his personal documents, under which he hopes some day to obtain a pension from the French government.

Among the documents are letters signed by his grandmother, Rosalie de Mandes, daughter of an impoverished Spanish grandee, who, during Napoleon's flight from Waterloo through the north of France, managed a small tavern which provided a night's refuge to the vanquished Caisar.

BRITISH CAPITAL IN LARGER AMOUNTS

American and English Capital Competing in Canadian Real Estate Markets.

"British capital is now coming to Canada in larger volume for real estate development, than before the war," according to F. Robins, of Toronto, who has just returned from a four months' business trip through England. "Doubtless the stagnant condition of the real estate market and the heavy taxes in England are important factors in sending money here for investment," continued Mr. Robins.

Commenting on the real estate conditions in Canada, Mr. Robins said that all branches reported increased volume of sales. More large transactions in the way of leases and sales had been made in the past few weeks than during the last two years. American capital was coming here in large quantities, attracted by the good return of mortgages and the added benefit of a favorable exchange.

Another interesting fact in connection with real estate transactions was the change that has come over the small artisan class of buyers. Before the war these people would pay $10 or so down

GANDHI ADMITS GUILT ON ALL ACCUSATIONS

Said He Would Cheerfully Submit to Highest Penalty—Six Year Sentence.

(Associated Press Cable)

Ahmedabad, British India, March 19.—Asked by the magistrate on Saturday, prior to being sentenced to six years' imprisonment, whether he pleaded guilty to all the charges made against him by the Advocate-General, Mohandas K. Gandhi, the non-co-operationist leader, replied in the affirmative.

The Advocate-General pointed out the articles of Gandhi's printed in Young India formed merely a part of the campaign to spread dissatisfaction openly to systematically render government impossible and to bring about the overthrow of the Government. He contended that the writings of Gandhi were not those of an uneducated or obscure man. It was true that the articles insisted on non-violence, but he asked what was the value of this "if you incessantly teach dissatisfaction against the Government and openly seek to instigate others to overthrow it?"

Thereupon Gandhi made a long statement, in which he admitted that teaching dissatisfaction against the existing system of government had become almost a passion with him. He declared he took all the blame for the disorders in Madras, Bombay and Chauri Chaura; but he added that if he were liberated he would keep up his work. Non-violence was the first and last article of his faith; he bore no ill-will against any single administrator nor any dissatisfaction towards the King's person.

Gandhi said he was in court to submit cheerfully to the highest penalty which could be inflicted and that there were only two courses open to the judge, either to resign if he felt the law was called upon to administer was evil and Gandhi was innocent, or to inflict the most severe penalty if he believed Gandhi's activity injurious to the public weal.

The judge in addressing Gandhi said it was impossible to ignore the fact that in the eyes of millions of his countrymen Gandhi was a great patriotic leader and a man of high ideals, leading a noble, even a saintly life; but his duty was to judge him as a man who admitted he had broken the law and committed what to the ordinary person must appear to be a great offence against the state.

Gandhi Thanked Court.

The judge said he was unable to understand how Gandhi could continue to believe violence would not be the inevitable consequence of his political teachings. He quoted the case of the agitator Tilak of twelve years ago and announced that he would pass the same sentence on Gandhi, as was imposed on Tilak, namely, the simple sentence of two years' imprisonment on each of the three counts, making six years altogether.

Gandhi in replying thanked the court for his courtesy. He said he considered the sentence as light as any judge could possibly have inflicted.

The news of the sentence of the non-co-operationist leader spread like wildfire through Ahmedabad and crowds besieged the offices of Young India to read Gandhi's statement. There was no disorder.

"The modern aim at music seems to be to invent new, strange noises."

"We don't ask children to discover the multiplication table, we ask them to learn it."

Professor Black condemned unthinking traditionalism, but added that there was also danger in the tendency to despise tradition.

CARPENTERS AND JOINERS.

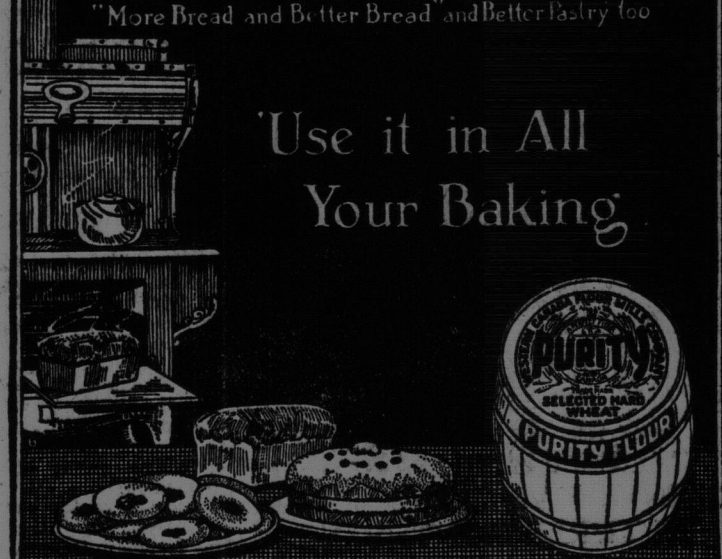

The Carpenters and Joiners Union, local 919, held its regular meeting last evening in the Trades and Labor Hall in Prince William street with A. C. Davidson, acting-president, in the chair. The meeting was largely attended and members unanimously voted to forgo a letter of condolence and sympathy to the death of George Sealey to the family. The meeting then endorsed that Mr. Sealey's claim for a full death benefit should be granted at once to his family. It was decided that a wreath should be sent which will carry his working card showing his membership in the union from March 6, 1902, to March 1922, being one of the oldest members in the union. Many of the members present last night's meeting spoke feelingly of Mr. Sealey's death and the great loss the union had met with through his demise.
