Comment on Recent Trade.
New York Times: The recent trade between the Yankees and the Red Sox which brought Egan and Elmer Smith to New York in exchange for three New York substitutes and an unnamed pitcher, has aroused a storm of protest, particularly in Boston and St. Louis. Following close upon the heels of the Yankee-Red Sox trade comes the announcement that the Giants have obtained Hugh McQuillan, star pitcher of the Braves, and it is expected that this latest transaction will bring forth more protests from other major league cities. The cry that the New York clubs are buying the pennants in their respective leagues has again been raised throughout the country. Both trades have been made at a time when the New York clubs are sorely pressed by the two St. Louis teams. It is difficult to see how these transactions will benefit baseball in general in spite of the fact that they may bring champions to this city.

Fans all over the two circuits, and especially in St. Louis, are arguing that trades such as these give a decidedly unfair advantage to the New York teams, since clubs in other cities are unable to obtain players that might help them in the races for the championships, and there are many followers of baseball in New York who are not in sympathy with such tactics. As a result of these two transactions, and the many protests they have aroused, it would not be surprising if the two major leagues enacted legislation before the start of next season to prevent the acquisition of star players at the height of the pennant campaigns. It is likely that the time limit for trading players, which is now Aug. 1, will be changed to July 1, or even earlier.

Even with the new strength acquired through their deals with the two Boston clubs, the two New York teams will have to fight hard to bring the world's series to this city again this year. The Giants have just completed one of the most difficult weeks of their arduous campaign with fair success and they are now leading the league by the margin of a game and a half. After breaking even with the Pirates in a double-header on Monday, they took four successive games from the Cardinals, but since then they

They rose to great heights in stemming the onrush of the Cards in the recent series at the Polo Grounds, but the St. Louis players are still within striking distance of the champions. The Yankees, with the help of the newly-acquired Egan, captured first place from the Browns by winning three out of the four games in St. Louis, but the Browns refuse to be beaten off and again went into the lead yesterday by virtue of its victory over the Red Sox while the Yanks were losing in Chicago.

last night when the Connecticut Valley Stock Farm, owned by Barnabas Fralick, was struck by lightning and totally destroyed. The stable was valued at $60,000, and in addition to this about $40,000 worth of race horse stock was burned to death. It was impossible to check up on all of the horses, as many of them ran wild after they had been liberated. Among those burned were Peter Vonnia, a seven-year-old stallion by Peter the Great, valued at $15,000; The Earl of Chatham and Nelson Todd, both of the latter being valued at $5,000.

PRICE PAID FOR PLAYFELLOW
Playfellow, the full brother of Man o' War, which has been the centre of a hard-fought legal controversy, is now back in his stall in the Quinny Stable's barn, and James F. Johnson's check for $102,000 is in the hands of Sam Hildreth, representing the Rancocas Stable. That check includes the price paid by Messrs. Sinclair and Hildreth for the horse last year, with interest. The decision of Mr. Johnson not to carry the case, in which the verdict was adverse to him, up to a higher court was reached and the entire interchange of horse and check. The coming foals of Playfellow, which has been in stud during his life spell as a racer, will be divided as equitably as possible between the Quinny and Rancocas stables.
