What Confidence Means

If money is the life-blood of business, confidence is the soul of business. You will not do business with anyone in whom you lack confidence. His offer may look like a genuine good-as-gold proposition, but you suspect trickery. Have you ever figured what the reader's confidence in The Guide means to you as an advertiser? Ever since it was first published, eight years ago, The Guide has exercised careful and exacting discrimination in regard to the advertisements it has allowed in its columns. As a result, The Guide has saved its readers thousands of dollars which might otherwise have gone into the pockets of unscrupulous persons. We do not claim perfection, but we do believe that no other paper can show a cleaner record. The result is evident in the reader-confidence which has been built up between The Guide and its subscribers. That this reader-confidence, when carefully guarded against abuse, has a cash value to reliable advertisers cannot be denied. Here is an example: "I would like to tell you of the satisfaction I have received thru answering the advertisement placed in the Grain Growers' Guide by Geo. Somerville, of Medora, Man., re Pure-bred R.C. Brown Leghorn Cockerels for sale. The one sent me is a dandy, and I am convinced that I made no mistake in answering The Guide advertisement in procuring what I wanted."—F. J. Barsby, Carleton Place, Sask. This is How Reader-Confidence Helps the Advertiser "I have had such a lot of enquiries from the ad, I will have to wait for a while before I put it in again."—H. Woodcock, Clanwilliam, Man. "I have already sold $41.70 and am all out of cockerels, and have sold six ducks and several enquiries for drakes and more cockerels."—J. R. Lowe, Chaplin, Sask. "As you may remember, I advertised in your columns last year, and the demand was so great that I had to turn quite a number off."—A. S. Clark, Riga, Sask. "The little ad I inserted in the Poultry Department brought me far more orders than I could fill for cockerels, so, believe me, I was more than pleased."—A. G. Routly, Herschel, Sask.
