Flexibility of English.

English is not only, as Richard Jefferies asserted, the most expressive and flexible of tongues, but also, in Swinburne's opinion, the most musi-cal. He proclaimed the lines— Music that gentiler on the spirit lies Than tired eyelids upon tired eyes to be unmatched for melody in any language. And few would venture to contradict such a master of music and tongues. But surely French ranks next on the roll of languages. For clearness of diction ft is unrivalled, and thanks to its abundance of vowels (close on one for every consonant), it flows rhythmically from the tongue.

DEAD RECKONING.

One Way of Determining a Vessel's Course On an Ocean Voyage.

Dead reckoning simply means the computation of a ship's longitude and latitude from her movements as recorded in the log and without having recourse to astronomical observa-tions. The chief elements from which the reckoning is made are these:

The point of departure—that is the latitude and longitude sailed from or last determined—the course or direction sailed in as ascertained by the compass, the rate of sailing, measured from time to time by the log, and the time elapsed.

The various principles or methods mollowed in arriving at the reckoning are known among navigators as "!ain sailing" and "middle latitude " However, the data thus ob-are always liable to considsailing. erable errors by reason of currents, lee-way, fluctuations of the wind and changes in the declination of the com. pass. The results arrived at by dead reckoning, therefore, must of neces-sity be corrected as often as possible by observation of the heavenly bodies. The little building had, of course, a gallery, and in the gallery the "gods" became so obstreperous on occasions that it was with great difficulty the play could be proceeded with. The ringleader, a well-known rough of the town, was a man named Bill Hantzhan. One night a happy inspiration seized Sothern. Having learned the name of this prominent member of the rowdy elements, he addressed him in the midst of the most unearthly noises as follows: "Mr. Hanrahan, will you be good enough to take charge of the gallery and keep order for me? I shall feel very grateful.

The result was magical. Bill be-came at once an official of the theatre and as such cracked the heads such good effect that it was only a little time before the best of order

GRAND TRUNK SYSTEM SERVES EIGHTY-NINE PER CENT. OF CANADA'S URBAN POPULATION

In the forty principal cities and In the forty principal cities and towns of Canada there is a total population of 2,918,788. These figures are given in the new publication "Canada, the Country of the Twentieth Century," prepared by Mr. Watson Griffin, and issued this week from Ottawa by the authority of the Minister of Trade and Commerce, Sir George Foster. They are based upon estimates furnished by the various city clerks and city assessors, and may be considered approximately correct. An examination of these statistics shows in amination of these statistics shows in a very striking fashion the notable part which the Grand Trunk System plays in the commercial life of Dominion. The cities and towns served by the railway and steamship lines owned and operated by the Trunk System have a population, according to these official statistics, of 2,606,435. The Grand Trunk thus serves over 89 per cent. of Canada's urban population grouped in its forty principal centres. In addition, the Grand Trunk serves hundreds of com-munities with populations of less than 12,000, which is the minimum fi-gure for inclusion in the list Mr. Wat-Griffin has prepared

How Prussia Was Reforested.

There was no need of celebrating Arbor Day in Prussia in the days when Friedrich Wilhelm I. was king, for that monarch had a plan all his own by which he replenished the forests and kept the country well supplied with fruit trees.

According to Bas Buch fur Alle, the king, having observed that there was a great dearth of fruit and oak trees in Prussia and not being willing to undertake the tremendous expense of reforesting the country himself issued an order to all clergymen that, after June 21, 1720, they should refuse to perform any marriage ceremony un-less the groom could produce evidence that he had just planted six fruit trees and an equal number of oaks. If it was in winter or in the middle of a dry summer, when plants would not grow, the groom had to produce and lay aside a sum of money sufficient to cover the cost of the trees and promise to plant the required numbe fall or spring came. In a Maori Wooing House. Among the Maoris sometimes in the hare matoro (the wooing house), a building in which the young of both sexes assembled for play, songs, dances, etc., there would be at stated times a meeting. When the fires burned low a girl would stand up in the dark and szy: "I love So-and-so. I want him for my husband." If he coughed (sign of assent) or said coughed (sign of assent) or said "Yes" it was well; if only dead silence she covered her head with her robe and was ashamed. This was not often. as she generally had managed to as-certain, either by her own inquiry or by sending a girl friend, if the proposal was acceptable. On the other hand, sometimes a mother would at-tend and say, "I want So-and-so for my son." If not acceptable there was gen erally mocking, and she was told to let the young people have their house (the wooing house) to themselves.

Arm in Arm With a Tigress.

It is related of Sir Edward Bradfor d that he once walked arm in arm so to speak, with a tigress. He was out shooting, and, always a fearless sportsman, had come to close quar-ters with his quarry. He fired, and either the ball failed to take effect, or but slightly wounded the army. She but slightly wounded the animal. She sprang... him and seized his left arm above the elbow. The pain must have been terrible, but Sir Edward kept and, realizing that it would be death to drag his mangled arm away and allow her to spring afresh at him he deliberately walked a few agonizing paces until his comrade was able to take aim and kill the brute. Thus to take aim and kill the brute. The his courage saved his life, though the amputation of his arm at the shoulder proved necessary
