

a member of the Baptist church took him. He held services in the hall every evening, and the catholics went to the house to see him. The catholics became greatly stirred up, and at last, in their rage, burned Mr. A's barn which was full of hay and a lot of grain.

One evening Mr. Chiniquy, had invited all to come and see what power the god of Rome had. The hall was crowded. The priest had told them that God would strike him dead. He said once a priest always a priest, and proceeded to consecrate the wafer. Then he ground it up in his hands and hitting his hands together scattered it on the floor. "Now what power has your wafer god," he asked.

Of coures they were very much astonished, and that night there were ten that wanted to leave the Catholic church, and Fr. Chiniquy sent in resignations to the priest for all who signified a desire to leave. He was