States Treasury under President Roosevelt, delivered a lecture to the students and faculty of Chicago University, March 1st, 1907, just previous to the financial panic of that year. He was speaking to a critical audience and knew his speech would be given a wide circulation. He said: "The time is coming when the manufactories will outgrow the country, and men by the hundred of thousands will in be turned out of the factory. The factories are multiplying faster than our trade, and we will shortly have a surplus, with no one abroad to buy and ıt, no one at home to absorb it because the laborer has is not been paid enough to buy back what he has crenated. The last century was the worst in the world's 11t history for wars. I look to see this century bring out · a the greatest conflict ever waged in the world. It will ial be a war for markets and all the nations of the on world will be in the fight as they are all after the ay same markets to dispose of the surplus of their facien tories." Why this surplus? It is, as Mr. Shaw says, albecause the laborer has not been paid enough to buy ter back what he has produced. Then the workers are ock used as pawns in the fight and die for their country rato obtain a market to dispose of the surplus wealth erthey themselves produced and that Shaw tells us we bercannot buy back because we are not paid enough. The worker is recompensed for his services in the rgle war with miserable pensions, street organs, and
