

my readers don't realize the fever in my veins, the longing that comes over me, as the result of this trip, to go home and establish and manage a series of out-apiaries. Under the circumstances I don't think it advisable, as I should be overburdened with work, and the Review, the bees, and myself would all suffer. I think my mission in life is to encourage and help others to make a success of bee-keeping, and in no way can I do this more effectually than by opening their eyes to the opportunities in the direction of keeping more bees.

The O. B. K. A. Exhibit.

When at the Buffalo Convention we had the pleasure of visiting the great exhibition. We will not attempt a description of its magnificence, will pass it over by merely saying that 'the half has not been told,' and advise those who have not been there not to miss seeing it before it closes. We found the Ontario Honey Exhibit on the gallery of the Agricultural building, a very neat display, of excellent quality, and as far as we could judge it compares favorably both in attractiveness and quality with the American exhibits, yet it is not nearly what we are accustomed to see at the Toronto "Industrial."

The Committee has been somewhat handicapped through insufficient donations of comb honey. There has been an abundance of extracted sent in. Mr. John Newton deserves credit for the neatness and order of the display. Mr. James Armstrong is now in charge. The following is a list of the contributors and contributions:

J. E. Holt, Newton Robinson, Ont., extracted clover honey.

John Newton, Thamesford, Ont., extracted clover honey, comb honey, comb foundation and beeswax.

H. G. Sibbald, Claude, Ont., extracted clover honey, basswood honey and comb honey.
