Over and Over,"Again

There is nothing that counts in the business world so much as systematic repetition. Telling the same thing over and over again, is a way of fixing that fact in the minds of readers. If a man has the best herd of Holstein cows in his vicinity, if he has Jerseys of a strain that is known through-out Canada, if his Shorthorns carry the richest blood of the breed, or if his Ayrshires boast an ancestry that takes them back to the patrician herds that roamed over the hills of Scot-land, whence come the greatest families of that breed—if any one of these things is true it is of supreme importance that the man who can lay claim to it should constantly reiterate that fact so that the reader will ultimately associate his name with that particular statement. It has been truly said that

It has been truly said that the mind of the average reader is changeable. As a people we are inclined to worship the spectacular and the last statement that we hear always places in the property of the statement that we hear always places in the statement that we hear always places in the statement that we have always the statement of the state stock to use space regularly in the columns of a farm paper like Farm and Dairy. Thus it is that the keen, far-sighted is that the keen, far-sighted breeders use these columns regularly.

Breeders of pure-bred dairy cattle who are out to make a success and to attain satisfactory results owe it to themselves to use the live stock advertizing columns of Farm and Dairy, and to use them regular. and to use them regularly. Ninety-five per cent. of the readers of Farm and Dairy are directly interested in dairying.
That is why breeders of dairy
