

SUNDAY.

SUNDAY is a day of work. And so it ought to be kept. Sunday is not a day of laziness. It should not be given up to sleep, idleness, or pleasure. It is a working day: it has a work that belongs to itself.

Jesus Christ rose from the dead on Sunday morning. Raise your body, not too late to go to Church. It is your duty, as a Christian, to attend the Lord's service, the Holy Communion service, on the Lord's day, when you can. Go regularly to Church, and do not wander from one place of worship to another.

Your little ones should go with you to Church. And, if needful, you should send them to a Church Sunday-school, and no other; that they may learn the religion into which they were baptized. Teach them to love God and His service.

MONDAY, &c.—Think of God every day, at your morning and evening prayers, and at other times. If a Feast or Fast comes on any day, observe it as you can. If it be a common day, do your common every-day duties in the fear of God, and look for a special blessing.

SOLITUDE and stillness render the night watches a fit season for meditation on the so often experienced mercies of God, which, when thus called to remembrance, become a delicious repast to the spirit, filling it with all joy, and consolation, giving songs in the night, and making darkness itself cheerful.

FRIDAY is the Fast of the Passion. It is a solemn day for devotion, for self-denial in food or other things, and for helping those in want or trouble. It is not a day of feasting and public amusement.

The reason that most men go back from grace and the means of grace, is that they do not draw close to God, so as to know Him as a Father, and do not use the Sacraments and means of grace in a way to find out their worth in the experience of their own souls.
