To Improve Calgary Bull Sale

As a result of the experience gained at this and previous sales and the discussion and suggestions made at the annual meeting, the following recommendations to the directors were made by E. L. Richardson, secretary and managing director of the Alberta Cattle Breeders' Association, under whose auspices the sale is annually staged.

1. Bulls under one year should not be accepted for sale. The sale is too large to permit wasting the time of the buyers while these calves are being sold. They want serviceable bulls. These calves would generally give better results if in the hands of the breeders for another year.

2. Bulls not bred in Alberta should be required to be in the province one year before being sold. Encouragement should be given Alberta breeders to purchase the best sires to be found anywhere, but there is no need of having same resold until they have been in the province one year, since Alberta cattle breeders are producing such a large number of bulls.

3. Have the judging done the first forenoon and start the sale at noon the same day. This would save about a day in the time the breeders, as well as the purchasers, would have to be away from home.

4. While there is some educational value in having all bulls at the sale pass through the ring, it does not seem right that the Association should permit bulls of the type and condition of those culled back to be sold at auction, and in that way have the approval of the Association. All breeders have been, in the past, and will be in the future, advised to leave such bulls at home. It is not practical to have all bulls examined before being shipped, but if a few breeders will persist in sending in some inferior bulls, through lack of feed or care or poor breeding stock, the animals culled back should at once be removed to a stable by themselves and sold privately by the owners if they wish, but not put through the sale ring.

5. Print the full pedigree in the catalogue.

6. The suggestion made at the annual meeting as to selling prize winners first is a splendid one, and I think it could be worked out to advantage in this way.—Number all animals as at present so each seller's lot will be stable together and so animals may be located easily when being shipped. (By the way, did you ever sort out and load 800 bulls from 519 buyers and ship them to 124 stations? It is some job). Sell all bulls between 12 and 18 months of age first, in order of age, with the exception of the prize winners, in the class of that age, the prize winners to be sold in order starting with the first prize. Repeat the same system in selling bulls between 18 and 24 months, then between 24 and 36 months, etc., with the exception of the champion and reserve champion of the breed, which should be sold first. Put the animals in the catalogue in the order in which they are to be sold, except, of course, the prize winners, which would be brought in first as explained. It often happens that a number of buyers are after the same champion, whose order of sale is near the last. Under that system, the other bidders have not then an opportunity to be competitors for the second prize animal, to their disappointment and the seller's loss.
