Blaming the Workers.

The change of government, with its dirty intrigues for party profit and advantage, intensified the national disgust. But the worst blow of all to popular fervour was the mean and cowardly excuse by which ministers attempted to cover the consequences of their neglect and ineptitude, when they attributed the defects of organization in recruiting and production to the laziness and drunkenness of the workers.—The Clarion (London).

In the West the French occupy a front of 543 1/2 miles, British 31 1/2 miles, and the Belgians 17 1/2 miles, making altogether 592 1/2 miles.

In the East the Russians have to hold a line extending over 856 1/2 miles while in the South the Serbians and Montenegrins cover 218 1/2 miles.
