BURSALE—One new rubber tired cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth the sorted all out with regard to the sorted all out wi and I was wafted skyward, clutching that talisman my ward-number tocket, like grim death. I was lowered gently to the deck, and an attempt was made to see my ward number, whether my wound had made me stupid, or not I cannot say, but I remember I would not part with that precious ticket. The most, I would do, on the urgent persuasion of a gentle, learned-looking gold-spectacled, Hindu surgeon, was to show the number "11". He nodded sagely to a willowy pathan who was spectacled, Hindu surgeon, was to show the number "11". He nodded sagely to a willowy pathan who was keeping "tally," and I shot up into the air again, to descend through the hatch to my ward deck.

Two Indian bearers lifted me and my strtcher from the grating and then wanted my ticket. I clutched it tight in my hand, and gingerly showed the number. They carried me to my ward and I was placed in a top berth. Then, and only then, would I part with my silly ticket and that was to a smiling Furopean nurse. I grinned at her in stupid fashion, and flattered myself I had been very cute over the ticket. Then my nurse spoke.

Have you ever tramped along a Highland road under a broiling sun and come suddenly on a little burn burbling down the mountainside? Did you mark the music of it, then? Ireland was faintly in the nurse's voice. It was limpid, it was dewy, it was glad, it was sorry. It said:

"Ye poor thing, you, would you like a bath?"

men, the Bremen and the Deutschland, reached this city to-day in the form of a letter received from an Englishman by Gustavus Ward of South Broadway. The writer, Clare H. Fulton, said in the letter: "I have seen the German submarines, Bremen and Deutschland," and continues:

"They were captured by the British and Deutschland," and continues:

"They were captured by the British and Deutschland," and continues:

Fulton is the son of an English Government to arrive at its destination following its departure from Germany. Fulton sid the reach of the time the said the German submarines were being used by the British, Fulton said that since seeing Ward on his last trip to this port he has been torpedoed twice and blown up in a mine sweeper once. On these occasions he escaped with slight injuries.

"Ye poor thing, you, would you sweeper once. On these occurred he escaped with slight injuries.

"Would you just be repeating that over," I said dreamily, "Would you like a bath?" "Sister," I said, waking up. "Do Irish ducks swim?"
"If that's the way you look at it,
I'll get the orderly and clean pyjamas for you—can you get up, I wonder or would you like a shirt instead of pyjamas?"

"Pyjamas," lease," I said, and I'd like the orderly to help me get up."

The orderly came with a suit of pyjamas and helped me out of my berth. My feet seemed to belong to me so little. I had to hang on to him as to a long-lost brother. As it happened, my bullet had made but the tiniest puncture, and although it was still wandering about somewhere in my interior the exterior damage was insignificant. Otherwise. I needs must have had what is called "a blanket both." You get that while you lie in bed. The orderly introduced me to the bath. It was of the latest pattern, made of highly glazed earthenware, and the taps and metal-work were of shining nickel. The water was hot and there was plenty of it. It was the acme of perfection.

"Shut up," I grunted in my pain.
"Oh, Allah— Allah— Allah! Aletish naval coxswain, she glided aside and 'like a little man," pulled the huge barge quietly and smoothly broadside-on to the steamship. Nimble seamen seized the cables let down from the ship, securing them to the hook-bitts of the barge.

We lay and gazed up at the sheer sides of the hospital ship and wondered ruminatively how we were to climb aboard. A Hindu doctor, wearing the black 'tabs' of the Indian medical service, descended to us and started examining the wounded. As he made diagnosis he handed the patitient a little card on which was pentiled. with a soothing draft.
