NOVA SCOTIA

It has been supposed that the prohibition law, owing to the apathy of the officials and the apathy of the people, is openly sold in every part of the province by a well enforced prohibitory law.

H. R. GRANT
Gen. Secy N. S. T. Alliance.
Sept. 5, 1913.

CANNING

Miss Bessie Kaye, trained nurse from Dorchester, Mass., is visiting her sister, Mrs. Geo. Blenus.

Dr. B. B. Loomer, of Stellarton, came for his family last week. Mrs. Loomer and children have been spending a couple of weeks with her mother, Mrs. Capt. Alfred Potter.

Miss Ethel Kaye, from Dorchester, Mass., who has been visiting her relatives here, returned to her home on Tuesday last.

Mrs. Cassie Coalteet has been spending a few days with Mrs. Eber Sanford at West Medford.

Mr. and Mrs. Halle Bigelow and family returned to their home, Monday, Sept. 15th.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Payzant have returned after spending three weeks visiting Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and St. John.

Mr. Harry Parker, of Berwick, was in town on Friday.

Doctor and Mrs. Stanley Spicer and family returned to their home this week.

Mrs. Aubrey Ward and two children from Ashmont, Mass., who have been spending the summer with Lloyd and Arthur Ward, returned to their home on Tuesday morning.

Mrs. William Henderson, of Summerville, Mass., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. James Henderson at Habitant.

Mrs. Edward Spicer, who has been spending the summer in Boston, returned last week.

FRAUDULENT SHIPMENTS

Under the Nova Scotia Temperance Act the Halifax dealer is not protected. Liquor is sent fraudulently to Nova Scotia Temperance Act counties. It is shipped in all sorts and sizes of packages. So expert have the dealers become in the matter of fraudulent shipping that only occasionally is it possible for officers to seize the shipments. A few dealers have been more than once convicted.

HALIFAX INFLUENCE

Halifax does more than send supplies of liquor into towns, villages, and rural communities. Its licensed bartenders are training schools, whose bartenders become the most defiant dive keepers in the different places where liquor is illicitly sold. In addition to this "the trade" in Halifax co-operates with the town or village law-breaker when a fight is on for law enforcement.

Is it any wonder that good citizens throughout the Province are filled with indignation as they think of the far-reaching injurious effect of the Halifax trade?

"It is no exaggeration to say that the licensed traffic in Halifax is an unmitigated curse to the rest of Nova Scotia."

IS THERE A REMEDY

Is there a remedy? Certainly! The time has come for action.

By vote of the citizens of Halifax, or, better, by vote of our legislators in the House of Assembly, the license system ought to be abolished within a year. It has been tolerated too long.

On the requisition of one-fourth of the resident ratepayers of the City of Halifax, the City Council must direct that the votes of the electors of the City be forthwith taken for or against the granting of licenses. If the electors declare against license, the City becomes dry. At the present time signatures are being obtained to the necessary petitions and within a few months the citizens of Halifax may decide to abolish the traffic.

If they do not so decide, if they rather decide to permit a traffic which is not only a menace to the moral and economic life of the city, but to the province at large, "it is not unreasonable to predict that the members of the House of Assembly, representing the various constituencies and interested in the welfare of the whole province will be constrained by direct legislation at an early date to abolish the traffic."

SATISFACTORY CONDITIONS

Conditions will be satisfactory in the Province, so far as provincial legislation is concerned, only when we secure the abolition of the licensed traffic in Halifax and the thorough enforcement of the Nova Scotia Temperance Act in every county.

To obtain thorough enforcement, the Inspector-in-Chief must be empowered to send deputies to prosecute violators of law where local officials are inefficient.

Sentiment in Nova Scotia demands the overthrow of the liquor traffic in every part of the province by a well enforced prohibitory law.
