A Vain Chase

It was a very hot day and the fat man who wanted the 12.20 train through the gate at 12.21. The train was handicapped was watched with great interest both from the train and on the station platform. At its approach the breathless and perspiring crowd of the road weary passengers back trail and a vacant "red cap" came out to relieve the grip.
"Where's he?" he enquired, "was you able to catch that Pennsylvania train?"
"My son," replied the patient man, "I was merely chasing it in the yard."

eye pleasantly with choice old-fashioned furniture, walls covered with pictures and drawings, many of them the work of the novelist's husband, Mr. Thomas Robert Mac-quoid, while vases of gay autumn foliage and flowers fill the rooms with warm color.She is a silver-haired old lady of close upon 88 years of age, working without the aid of glasses. Her face is sweet and expressive, her hands very small and well formed, and she is petite and graceful though somewhat bent in figure. Her study is in keeping with the author's dainty personality.Mrs. Macquoid did not begin writing until she was thirty years of age, and there are now fifty novels to her credit, commencing with her first story, "A Bad Beginning: The Story of a French Marriage," which was published by Messrs. Smith, Elder and Co., in 1862.She met Dickens at her first ball when she was a girl of sixteen, at a friend's house in Great Portland St., London. Clarkson Stanfield, R.A. was there, and Mrs. Dickens, a plump but attractive woman, and her sister, Miss Hogarth, but with a singularly sweet and happy face. Dickens was engaged to dance with Miss Stanfield, but in a fit of absent-mindedness forgot to take his place in the set. He was intent on watching the dancers. Mrs. Macquoid recalls him as somewhat florid in style and observing everything so tensely that he seemed rather oblivious of the amenities of the occasion. He hesi-tated about offering his arm to any of the ladies for supper, and finally at the last moment took down the plainest girl in the room.At the time of this meeting with Dickens, Mrs. Macquoid, whose maiden name was Katharine Thomas was developing a taste for literature.
She had, indeed, essayed some verses and sketches, and was nicknamed the authoress by her brothers and sisters. She was evidently too retiring to buttonhole the rising novelist, even during the glorious opportunity of a dance, and so there is no early encouragement of her talents by Dickens to record. Shortly afterwards her mother removed with her family to France, and during her prolonged sojourn there the future novelist acquired a fluent knowledge of French and became deeply interested in French life and literature.These early experiences, exercised a marked influence over Mrs. Mac-quoid's writings. Her first novel, written at the suggestion of her husband when they were living in the midst of artistic circles in Chelsea, was entitled, as we have seen,
"A Bad Beginning: The Story of a French Marriage." It proved however, to be a very good beginning for the author. Many years later Mrs. Macquoid achieved a brilliant success with another French story, "At the Red Glove," which was first published as a serial in Harper's Magazine. Her travel books on "Brittany," "Normandy," and "The Ardennes," so charmingly illustrated by her husband, all show Mrs. Mac-quoid's familiarity with French rural life, and hold their own as the companions of the tourist.The publication of "Patty" in 1871 marked the turning point of Mrs.
Macquoid's career as a novelist. It first appeared as a serial in Mac-millan's Magazine, and attained great fame on both sides of the Atlantic.After this Mrs. Macquoid's pen was so much in demand for novels and serial stories that for many years she wrote on an average of eight hours a day, and even now, at close upon 88, she spends some five hours a day at her typewriter.Mr. Macquoid is no less wonderful, for at nearly 92 he is still daily at work in his studio, and has recently had a private show of his water color sketches. It was delightful to see the serene happiness of these veteran workers after treading the path of life side by side for more than sixty years. If their faces are set to the golden west, their hearts are young as the dawn.—English paper.

FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER

A Simple Bread Pudding

Line the bottom of a large dish with some pieces of bread (stale bread will do), cut all shapes to fit it, spread first with a little butter, then thickly with either orange or lemon marmalade. Beat up three eggs, add pint of milk, pour over, add a sprinkle of sugar and bake in a moderate oven until a rich brown.
This is very economical pudding as it uses up all pieces of bread, and is much liked.

Prune Pudding

Six ounces suet, six ounces breadcrumbs, half pound prunes, two ounces sugar, three eggs, quarter pint milk. Chop suet fine, stone and chop the prunes, mix suet, breadcrumbs prunes and sugar together.
Beat the eggs in a little more than a quarter pint of milk. Stir in dry ingredients, and mix well. Put in a basin covered with buttered paper, and steam for three hours. Serve with any sweet sauce.

Spice Cake.

Two cups brown sugar, one-half cup butter, scant two cups sour cream, one teaspoonful soda, one teaspoonful cinnamon, one nutmeg, yolks of five eggs, two and one-half cups of flour. Bake in layers. Use boiled frosting.

NERVES OF STOMACH.

No household is healthy where the food provided is not wholesome. A family to which rich food is served continually, cannot be well. Plain, savory steaks and roasts, oysters and clams, in season, and fresh milk and eggs, light, thoroughly baked bread, carefully cooked cereals and vegetables with lots of fruit, either stewed or fresh, are the foods to employ. Warm breads, pies, cakes, pickles, fried food, puddings and confections, and strong tea and coffee can be enjoyed by most people, sometimes with impunity, but in families where they are frequently served it will be found that there is also frequent illness. "My stomach has nothing to do with my illness," they say. "Oh! no; it is my nerves." As though nerves were not dependent, alas! upon digestion, good or the reverse!

NOTES AND NOTIONS.

The Red Geranium in Her Muff.

A few winters ago every woman who made any pretense toward modishness wore a white gardenia against the dark fur of her neck-scarf. This year the scarlet geranium is the thing, and these erstwhile inexpensive blossoms, genuine and artificial, have made a surprising leap in price. The touch of brilliant red against the dark fur neckpiece or muff is very chic—now that red is the fashion—and the bright hue is also cheerful and warm on snappy winter days. Red is extremely fashionable this midwinter season, and is seen in hat feather, neckbows and even whole costumes, a peculiar brick red shade in broadcloth being the fad of the hour.

Even Garters Glisten Now.

Everything has a sparkle of its own this year—or rather a sparkle lent by the brightness of rhinestones or crystal beads. Milady's garters are jeweled to be in line with fashionable requirements and are made of velvet-edged satin ribbon, shirred over elastic, a design in rhinestones decorating the front of the garter very effectively.

Music and Drama

A Girl of the Mountains

Manager Johnson announces that new version of the four act society drama by Lena B. Parker entitled "A Girl of the Mountains" will be seen at the Grand, Thursday, January 23rd.This is not a Western play, but a society drama telling a strong and interesting story of a girl's love and betrayal, her sacrifices and finally her success and happiness. The story is simple and straightforward, with strong and pointed situations and the word ideas worked out are said to have gone far to make the phenomenal success which has been the good fortune of the piece since its initial performance. In addition to this Wee and Lambert have always taken care to give the productions an environment of scenery, costumes and electrical effects that are bewilderingly beautiful and provides a class of clever artists.

The Travelling Salesman.

"The Travelling Salesman," James Forbes' best comedy, will be in attraction at the Grand, Thursday, Jan.
28th.The play, which has been seen here many times, is pleasantly remembered for its many laughs, and the charming bits of pathos and sentiment in the story. The cast which the Henry B.
Harris Estate is offering, is headed by the jolly round comedian, Shen Camp, who possesses that rare attribute of the comedian, the laughing spirit. The play has been rejuvenated and is said to be better than ever, and the production will be presented in its entirety.

PARIS

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Jan. 23.—A box bowing alley has been opened on River street and is already receiving a liberal patronage.Dr. and Mrs. Gould, Banfield street, attended the funeral of the latter's mother this week.Tuesday evening will be the annual meeting of the Paris Board of Trade, when the various reports were received and officers for the ensuing year elected.As we were saying, Paris weather is the most delightful on earth—sometimes.The Ontario Tankard primaries which were to be played here on Tunesday night to be played here on Tuesday, had to be called off for lack of ice.A goodly number of hockey enthusiasts journeyed to Brantford on Tuesday night to witness the Telephone City bunch play hockey with London.Extensive repairs and improvements to buildings and grounds were freely discussed at the annual meeting of the Agricultural Society on Monday. If possible, permanent coops will be placed in the poultry building, and a grand stand erected during the present year; the grounds also will receive attention. Owing to damages to the society's buildings, sporting organizations will not be permitted to use the grounds the coming summer.The new officers are: President, J. P. Barker; 1st vice-pres., H. Tisdale; 2nd vice, James Miller, Directors, Messrs. Teller, Webber, Deans, Wm. McCormick, was visiting Mrs. John Duncan, Jane street.Miss Farquharson was a guest of her brother, Rev. Chas. Farquharson, St. George.A large crowd took advantage of the splendid sheet of ice at the rink Tuesday evening.Rev. Mr. Reid will lecture on "Scotland and the Scotch," in the Presbyterian church on Monday, Feb.

3rd. The lecture will be interspersed with Scotch song and a splendid entertainment is assured.APPRECIATION.
212 Nelson street.
Brantford, Jan. 22, 1913.
Brantford Courier, Brantford, Ont.Dear Editor,—Just a few lines to tell how I appreciate your paper in our home. The longer I take your paper the better I like it. When I subscribed for your paper nearly three years ago I was also a subscriber to one of Toronto's leading daily papers, and I took the Courier for the news of our city and the sermon published weekly by Pastor Russell.But I saw as time progressed that your paper contained all the news that I got in the Toronto paper, and besides it contained the sermons which I greatly appreciate, as they have been a great source of comfort from time to time. The pastor's clear, logical and scriptural presentation of the doctrine of the Atonement, and other kindred subjects of the Bible, has far surpassed everything I have ever heard or read before or since.It appears to me that all truth seekers, lovers of truth and righteousness will be greatly blessed and helped to a clearer understanding of the Word of God by the reading and studying of Pastor Russell's sermons, which appear weekly in your valuable paper. We are living at a time when the truth on every subject is being brought to light, as the Scriptures declare, "the light that shineth brighter and brighter unto the perfect day." I am glad, dear editor, that you are assisting in throw-

Serum Said to Cure

Consumption is to be Made Public to the WorldBERLIN, Jan. 23.—Dr. Friedmann —indignant over the fact of certain physicians declaring they are in possession of his tuberculosis serum, whereas he declares what they have is ineffective or positively harmful—will place his remedy at the disposal of the Minister of the Interior today.One prominent Berlin physician attempted to get Friedmann bacilli from the body of a man who had been inoculated by Friedmann, and asserts he succeeded.How they secured Serum Others secured cultures from the bacteriologist with whom Friedmann conducted some experiments twelve years ago, and who has been claiming he preserved the original culture.
Friedmann had not planned to disclose the remedy so soon, but declares he is unwilling to have his name associated with serums being employed by his rivals, many of whom, moreover, have been attacking him bitterly. Friedmann has been deluged with offers to visit America and personally introduce his serum, and has about decided to do so.Splendid Year Reported in Con-
