The "playing" of traveling troupes by local societies has not, so far as we have been able to learn, proved a paying investment. As a rule, these contracts stipulate that the players receive $35 and from 50 to 75 per cent of the gross receipts above that amount, the society paying for the hall, the printing, and doing the necessary bill-posting. The troupe takes absolutely no risk—the contract contains no allowances for bad weather or bad roads—and if any Finishing Cattle for Market.

Finishing off beeves quickly for market is highly important at times, and never more so than now when the continuance of present high prices can only be conjectured. It is a most favorable time, therefore, to fatten and sell not only all creatures that will make prime beef, but all farrow cows, light oxen or lean steers and any description of neat cattle that can no longer be kept at a profit. As a rule, the sooner a farmer is quit of such stock the better. Rich pasture and heavy feeding with cotton seed or linseed (crushed or ground), wheat bran, out meal or cern meal, will put these cattle in passable condition in a surprisingly short time. Begin with a small quantity when cattle are not used to grain, increasing the allowance steadily untit they are taking all they can eat without apparent detriment.

Hogs in Clover Grow Fat, Hogs running on clover are singular free from disease, says the American A riculturist. If a wind-proof shelter riculturist. If a wind-proof shelter if given the sows at farrowing time, with plenty of clear water at all times, they care during the growing season will no encrosely on the farrowr's time further than to trrigate the 'pasture' occasionally to keep the clover thrifty. In the lat fall feed on clover thay, turnips, beets and a little grain. Large, rangy sows should be kept, as they are the best grazers are milkers, and should not be bred to fin boned, quick growing males. The mothe will ensure the pigs a good start and the sire a quick growth, so that they may be finished with the least expense for grain.

Notes About Horses. Horses need to be fattened for market. The colt's education can hardly begin too early.

For slow draught upon the farm, road or in the city, the walking gait is the most important.

Have the colt's feet put in shape every Have the colt's feet put in snape every few weeks so as to keep them true and level. When the tees are allowed to become too long there is danger of producing ring-bone.
