How to Fix Your Black Eye.

Ecchymosis of the eyelids—in plain language, "a black eye"—is by no means a misfortune confined to bruisers. Even a slight blow from any source is liable to cause it, and it is an interesting question to the man of peace and social standing how to get rid of it in the shortest time possible, since no excuse which he may offer since no excuse which he may offer is likely to be accepted by his associates. The left Transmission of Heat.

Heat is transmitted in three ways—by conduction, as when the end of a short rod of iron is placed in a fire and the opposite end becomes warmed—this is conducted heat; by conviction—by means of currents—such as the warming of a mass of water in a boiler, furnace or saucepan; and by radiation, as that diffused from a piece of hot metal or an open fire. Radiant heat is transmitted like sound or light, in straight lines in every direction, and its intensity diminishes inversely as the square of the distance from its center or point of radiation.—Once a Week.

"Then I'll wring his neck!"

Before I could stop him he dodged under the rope and litted Dick out of the cradle. The animal woke up and took in the situation in about the tenth part of a second, and then he fastened his hands into Pete's hair, got a grip with his teeth on the slugger's nose, and we had a museum, menagorie and circus combined for the next five minutes. Pate regard.

bined for the next five minutes. Pete roared, and wooped, and pranced around in pain and terror, and the bab pulled handfuls of hair from his head, and bit and scratched like a wildcat. When we finally got him off that slugger was a sight to behold, and had to be taken to the hospital at once. Two hours after he had had his wounds dressed I went in to see him, and as soon as I spoke to him he began lorying and asked: began crying and asked:
"Was it a baboon which did this?"

"Yes."

"Big as a lion?"

"Oh, no. He weighs about twenty-six pounds. Why do you weep?"

"Hadn't I orter weep?" he savagely demanded, as the tears came afresh. "I'vehad thirteen fights and knocked my man out systry time, and now to be downed by a

MONKEYING WITH A BABOON.

A Hard Slugger of St. Louis Gets Knocked Out in One Round.

In the old St. Louis museum we had, among other attractions, a baboon called Dick. He was a solid chunk of a fellow, good tempered, and a great favorite. He had one pecularity, though, which we had to cater to. He took short naps twice a day, and if aroused before his time he was as ugly as sin all the best of the day. Wo had him dressed up as a little boy, and when the time came to take his nap he crept into an old fashioned cradle, and the fat woman generally rocked him to leep. That very thing was quite a draw, and plenty of people cume in solely to see the baboon rocked off to slumber.

One day, soon after Dick had closed his syes, a half drunken chap entered the places and plets which held him spellbound for a speaking the name of Awful Pete, and was a sard slugger. I tried to reason with him and get him out, but he unfortunately caught aght him out, but he unfortunately caught his per louis his tricks. I sought to explain, but he wouldn't have it, saying:

"T paid to see the bab, and I'm going to see him or bust the biller!"

"But if you wake him up he'll fight."

Saved by a Dog.

The intelligence of the brute creation was strikingly illustrated when a dog belonging to Samuel Green, living on Sixth street, below Barrlay, literated when a dog belonging to Samuel Green, living on Sixth street, below Barrlay.

Lieut. C. A. Coryell, formerly of the One Hundred and Forty-first New York volunteers, Twentieth army corps, was with Sherman on the farmy about 2 o'clock Mrs. Green put her little son, Maurice, to bed, and after watch he must be caught and a rouse death of the farmy and the favo hour a fall, followed by the cries of a child and the subdued growling of a dog, apparant was the content of the base of a child and the subdued growling of a dog, apparant was

When Mr. Green seized the youngster, the dog jumped up and licked his face and hands in order to manifest his approval, and in other ways exhibited unbounded joy. The child sustained a severe flesh wound on the forehead, but beyond this injury was unhurt. Mr. Green has purchased a costly collar for the dog, and now says that he would not sell it for any money.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

clutching his little dress between his teeth. The dog was growling at a rapid rate, as if to attract attention, and seemed to fully realize the dangerous situation. A glance sufficed to show the father that his son, with true in uvenile independence, had jumped out of bed, and attempted to walk down the stairs without assistance.

His foot had evidently caught in the carpet, and he was plunging headlong down toward the door when the dog rushed to the door and saved him from possible death by catching him by the dress and holding him there until human aid arrived.

When Mr. Green seized the youngster, the dog jumped up and licked.

"How do I know that I'll not be taken prisoner?"

Coryell thought a moment and then decided to make the venture. He laid across the narrow dike leading to the dog rushed to the door when the dike the water in the rice fields was five feet deep.

The lieutenant reached the opposite shore without any misgivings. The Confederate produced some tobacco and a trade was made in no time.

A blood vessel of the brain has lost some of its elastic strength; food is abundant; digestion is good; blood is made in abundance, but little is worked off by exercise; the tension on every artery and vein is at a maximum rate; the even circuitous flow is temporarily impeded at some point, throwing a dangerous pressure on another; the vessel which has lost its elastic strength gives way, blood is poured out, a clot is formed which, by its pressure on the brain, produces complete unconsciousness. This is the apoplectic stroke. It will be perceived that there are two leading conditions upon which the production of the stroke depends—a lessened strength in the vessel and an increased tension on it.—Hall's Journal of Health.
