Ask For Ayer's

Sarsaparilla.

Sarsaparilla, and be sure you get it.

With its forty years of unexampled success in the cure of Blood Diseases, you can make no mistake in preferring

Ayer's

to any other.

The forerunner of modern blood medicines, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is still the most popular, being in great demand than all others combined.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is selling faster than ever before. I never hesitate to recommend it."—George W. Wiltman, Druggist, Albany, Ind.

"I am safe in saying that my sales of Ayer's Sarsaparilla far exceed those of any other, and it gives thorough satisfaction."—L. H. Bush, Des Moines, Iowa.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla and Ayer's Pills are the best selling medicines in my store. I can recommend them con-sciently."—C. H. McKim, Pharmacist, Roseland, Ill.

"We have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla here for over thirty years and always recommend it when asked to name the best blood-purifier."—W. T. McLean, Druggist, Augusta, Ohio.

I have sold your medicines for the last seventeen years, and always keep them in stock, as they are staples.

There is nothing so good for the youthful blood as Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

R. L. Parker, Fox Lake, Wis.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla gives the best satisfaction of any medicine I have stock. I recommend it, or, as the Doctors say, 'I prescribe it over and over.' It never fails to meet the cases for which I recommend it, even where the doctors' prescriptions have been of no avail."—C. F. Calhoun, Monmouth, Kansas.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

BIG HANNAH.

The Jry-cook merchant, Jeremiah

Poole, of Halifax, Nova Scotia, was not a rich man so far as worldly goods were concerned, but, if a man is blessed whose olive branches number seven he was to be envied.

Seven young Poole's assembled together around his table three times a day and many a sigh did he breathe as he saw what terrible inroads their vigorous young appetites made on the contents of his larder.

Mrs. Poole was a fair-haired woman with a perpetual smile, which looked somewhat frost-bitten. She was accus-toed to pacifying duns, and lived in a state of tension, always unsuccessfully striving to make both ends meet.

"Mamma," said her eldest child one day, "there is a woman at the door who says she heard you wanted a girl."

"So I do, Abbie," replied the mother,

"but we must get June out of the house first. She is saying the most terrible things about not getting enough to eat and the scarcity of blankets on the servant's bed, and I am sure I do the best

I can. If the new girl hears her she will be just as angry as June herself."

"Well, ma, I'll tell her to come tonight, and meanwhile we can get rid of June."

The Poole's lived in a tumble-down, wide-spreading cottage in the middle of a big garden, a short distance out of the city.

They were not famous for tidiness, and were glad to get any kind of a servant, not having the face to be particular as to references, for help was scarce, and they were poor.

Mrs. Poole was a painstaking but remarkably unsuccessful housekeeper. Her children had been allowed to come up anyhow, and partook largely of their parents' shiftlessness. They were, a healthy and handsome crowd, but everything was always at sixes and sevens in the home of the Poole's.

June was disposed of, not without trouble, and the new girl came and took her place.

The young Poole's immediately christened her "Big Hannah," for her proportions were indeed massive. Her form was tall and squarely built and her hands and feet very large. Her face, however, was handsome, but heavily unadorned, and the features somewhat masculine.

Big Hannah was strong and active, and worked with a will. She swept, and the worn and fragile carpets fairly flew off the floor; she dusted, and a breeze rushed through the house; while her exercises were always accompanied by a careful whistle, which seemed odd and expetuous out of place on the part of a female domestic.

Mrs. Poole delighted in her, for never had there been found such an adept in the art of getting rid of duns; and the children loved her, for she excelled all other servants, male or female, in putting up swing tiles, etc., etc., and seemed to enjoy this portion of her duties more than her regular work.

Every one knows that Halifax is a garison town, and that desertions from the rank of the regiments of the British army stationed there are numerous.

The single report of a heavy gun from the citadel, or one of the forts by which the harbour is surrounded, is the signal that a man has deserted, and the lookout soldiers are warned to search for him without delay. The punishment, too, for the crime of desertion was at one time terribly severe. The offender was tried up to the triangles and severely flogged, and then branded on the back with the letter 'D' a mark of disgrace which he must carry with him to the grave.

A week after Hannah's installation in the Poole family, there was a grand military parade and review of troops on the common. Of course the young Poole's were ardent admirers of such brilliant pageants, and besought their mother to allow them to attend. She hesitated but her children invariably had their own way, and she gave a conditional consent. They might go to the review if Hannah would accompany them.

To their surprise, she flatly refused.

The eldest girl, Abbie, saw that under the somewhat defiant answer and look of big Hannah there lay something deeper.

She waited till the other children returned to their mother, and said:

"Hannah, you have some reason for
