OTTAWA SCANDAL.—The Ottawa correspondent of the Montreal Herald says:

"A choice bit of scandal, in which a prominent M. P. is implicated, has just come to light. It seems that this gentleman, who is a married man, has been paying attention to a dashing grass widow who boards in the same hotel, and at the same time has been amusing himself with flirting with another married lady. In an indiscreet moment he confided to each of the fair ones a very unflattering opinion of the other; applying to each, it is said, a most unparliamentary epithet in so doing. Shortly after the two ladies met, and in the heat of a jealous discussion each let out what had been said of the other by the object of their mutual affection. The result was that one of the ladies entered an action for defamation of character against the gay Lothario. The latter, who expected his true and lawful wife to arrive in a few days, not knowing what to do, left the matter to arbitration of his friends of both sides, who decided that the fickle M. P. should hand over the sum of $1,000 to soothe the lady's wounded feelings."

This was not the end of the matter, however. The Ottawa Free Press says:

"But this hope was in vain as the following sequel to the story will show. The affair naturally caused a great deal of talk, and in conversation about it a popular member from the Maritime Provinces was indiscreet enough to make some very disparaging remarks concerning the woman in the case who is not a grass widow. This came to the ears of the lady in question, who, encouraged by the success of the grass widow, thought this was a good opportunity to try her hand at the same game. She accordingly gave instructions to a solicitor to commence an action against the offending M. P. for defamation of character, claiming $3,000. It remains to be seen whether she will be as successful as the gay grass widow."

These newspaper correspondents have a very exasperating habit of concealing names in such cases as the above, and nine times out of ten innocent people suffer in reputation in consequence. Who is "the most popular representative from the Maritime Provinces," and who the prominent M. P.

NEW IRISH MOVEMENT.—We hear a good deal lately about alleged dissatisfaction and revolt among the Irish Nationalists, but as the stories come from quarters notoriously hostile to Irish interests and to the policy of the Irish Parliamentary party, they should in all cases be received with caution if not with absolute distrust. Parnell and his associates are doing their work too well to fear that any large portion of their countrymen will be influenced by the pretended friendship of those whose sole object is to cause that "split in the party" by which alone can compliance with Irish demands for justice be much longer refused. The following is the latest story sent by cable to the American press:—

London, April 7.—A revolt against Mr. Parnell is being organized among the ultra Irish Nationalists. Its originator is Mr. James Stephen, the venerable ex-Head Centre of the Fenian Brotherhood, who has been living quietly in Paris for the past few years taking no active part in Irish affairs. The new party which he proposes to organize will be opposed equally to the doctrines of the Parnellites on the one hand, and those of the dynamiters on the other. He hopes to secure the co-operation of the best men in both parties. He intends to call a council of Irish Nationalists to meet at Paris during the present month to formulate a platform and decide upon the methods of organization and subsequent operations.

Among those whom he will invite to this conference will be Gen. Macadaras, John O'Leary, John Savage, and Sir Charles Gavan Duffy. Mr. Stephens has also been recently in correspondence with some of the Irish leaders in the United States, and is said to have received pledges of the adhesion of several influential Irish American societies. He says the young men who should be fighting Ireland's battles aggressively and ceaselessly are either too slow and timorous or fatally reckless, and are accomplishing nothing. The existing organizations are antagonistic and neutralize each other. What is needed is a new party with a platform broad enough to admit the strongest men in all existing organizations, and a concentration of all efforts for Ireland through the machinery of this new party, which will be irresistible. He objects to Parnellism because it chooses a wrong field for the engagement. The battle for freedom is not to be fought in St. Stephen's. Neither the present Parliament, nor any Parliament likely to succeed it, will do justice to Ireland. Sterner methods than Mr. Parnell's are needed. And besides he is not so implicitly trusted by his own party as is commonly believed. There are serious defections among his followers. Some of the ablest among them are in favor of the proposed new departure. They complain that he is too autocratic and that it outrages their manhood to be compelled to render the degree of subserviency that he demands. They say also that in grasping for Parliamentary success in petty details he loses sight of the great object for which he is pledged to fight, but which he really jeopardizes by entangling deals and alliances with the Government.

CATHOLIC REPRESENTATION IN CANADA.—The Senate of Canada has seventy-eight members. In the Province of Quebec, where the Catholics number 1,170,718, and the Protestants, 184,732, the Protestant minority has seven representatives in the Senate, or one for every 26,370; while the Catholic majority has but one for every 68,885. The Catholic minority of Ontario, 320,839, has but four representatives, or one for every 80,209 3-4; and the French Canadians of Ontario, fully 100,000, have as yet no representative in the Senate. The Province of New Brunswick, where the Catholics number 109,091 of a total of 321,233, has but one representative, out of the ten allotted to the Province. Nova Scotia has also ten senatorial representatives, of whom two are Catholic—the Protestants having one senator to every 40,057 of their population; the Catholics, one to every 58,743. In Prince Edward Island, the total population is 108,891. Of these, 47,115 are Catholics. Of the four Senators, but one is a Catholic. Manitoba has one Catholic Senator, but British Columbia, with 10,043 Catholics to 19,564 Protestants, has no Catholic representative in the Senate.

The startling discovery has been made that the so-called "life preservers" on some of the finest steamers that leave Boston harbor are consummate shams, which, in the hour of trial, would prove as delusive as a rope of burnt straw. The whole two hundred "preservers" on one steamer were condemned by the inspector as useless. When thrown overboard with a twenty-four pound weight attached, they would sink to the bottom with the eagerness of lead. It may well be doubted if a large number of our lake steamers, if subjected to similar tests with regard to their life preservers, would pass muster in a way any more satisfactory. The sooner some system of testing these things is inaugurated, the better for the safety of the travelling public. If criminally crowded steamers are supplied with "preservers" which are unequal to the task of supporting twenty-four pounds, then the horrors of the Saturday excursion are more than doubled.—Toronto Globe.

Mrs. Sarah Ray, a washerwoman of Leadville, who has made a fortune of $1,000,000, has had an eventful life. She was the first white woman who ever dared set foot in Leadville, and as such helped found the city. She dug in the mines, scoured the plains as a scout, and last, but not least, took in washing from the Leadville miners, and to-day has a snug little fortune that pays her an income of $30,000 a year. She is now a woman of about fifty, weighing some 140 pounds, and is active and spry. She has a daughter whom she is educating in the East, who is a handsome and lady-like girl of eighteen.

At a recent session of the British House of Commons Mr. Healy was three times called to order by the chairman. Urging that the fresh water fisheries act amendment bill should be extended so as to protect the rights of poor fishermen in Ireland, he said the subject appeared important to himself and his colleagues, though it might not to Irish occupants of the treasury bench, who only wanted to draw their salaries and go home. The chairman.—The honorable member is not entitled to cast such imputations on members of the government. Mr. Healy—I beg pardon, sir, it it is supposed to be offensive. I did not mean it to be so. But will the government give us what we ask? [Mr. Dodds—No.] The honorable member for Stockton says "No." By his howling he is an authority in the House—but he can base his authority on no other ground. A little later, Mr. Healy, attacking the Duke of Devonshire on the ground that he had deprived poor fishermen of their rights in the river Blackwater, spoke of "the robbery practised by a ducal house on unfortunate cottier tenants." Lord E. Cavendish—I rise to order, sir. The chairman—I hope the honorable gentleman will see that such language applied to a member of the other House is indecorous and improper. Mr. Healy—As I have your ruling on this point, sir, I will accept it; but I think the son of the Duke of Devonshire might have left the correction to some other member. Mr. Dodds—I ask you, Mr. Chairman, whether the honorable member ought not to be called upon to withdraw what he has said. Mr. Healy—I venture to say that no one can point to an instance in which I have not accepted the ruling of the chairman; but I repeat that on any question affecting the Blackwater fisheries it would have been more in keeping with decency if some other gentlemen had risen up than the son of the duke—who profits to the extent of twenty or thirty thousand a year by the robbery of the unfortunate cottiers on the Blackwater. The Chairman—I cautioned the honorable member before, telling him such language was not proper; but he has repeated the same observation. I must tell him distinctly that it is out of order, besides being indecorous, to accuse a member of the other House of robbery. Mr. Healy—That being so, sir, I will only say that it would have been more in accordance with decorum and decency, if some other gentleman had interrupted me than the son of the duke who profits at the expense of the cottiers on the Blackwater. However, I will leave questions of good taste to those educated aristocrats from the north of England. The motion to report progress, which Mr. Healy had previously made was negatived without a division, and the honorable member failed to get the bill extended to Ireland.

Java is the home of the upas tree, and as it is only recently that true scientific explanations have been given of them, probably one theory may be interesting. Wonderful stories were told about the valleys where it grew. No living creature was able to live an instant exposed to its effects, and even birds in flying over would drop dead, so that the whole valleys were covered with their skeletons. When scientific men first began to enquire into it they could only with the greatest difficulty induce the natives to accompany them to the spots, with such dread and superstition were they held. A peculiar feature in the earthquakes in this part of the world soon solved the problem and exploded the theory as to the trees them selves. It was found that at certain times the sulphurous vapors and noxious gases escaping through the cracks in the earth in these valleys were so dense and poisonous as to be destructive to animal life, and at times had so affected the natives that they had retained the memory of such places and avoided them forever afterward. No evil effects were experienced by those who traversed the valleys, though there was unmistakable evidence that at periodic intervals they were deservingly to be avoided.

PROPAGANDA PROPERTY.—A despatch from Toronto, Ontario, says: "Archbishop Lynch, on being interviewed in reference to the report that legacies and donations given to the Propaganda will henceforth be received at foreign branch establishments, said that the report was quite correct, and that gifts or legacies would be received in trust by the chief officer of the Church in the district in which they were made. Branches will be established in the principal European capitals, and at New York, San Francisco, Quebec and Toronto. This step, the Archbishop said, was rendered necessary by the proposal of the Italian Government to purchase the property of the Propaganda on terms that would render the act little less than confiscation. The property had been gradually acquired through donations and legacies from all parts of the world, a large revenue being derived from it. Now, he said, the Italian Government proposed to compel a sale at about one-third its value. The ecclesiastical authorities in Rome were now investing money in foreign stocks so that it would be safe from the rapacity of the Italian Government."

Mr. O'Brien Moore, an editorial writer on the Galveston News, has recently fallen heir to a considerable property in Dublin. A wealthy uncle, the Duke of Caven, has died, bequeathing him a one-third interest in the vast estate, which is said to be valued at several hundred thousand pounds. Mr. Moore comes from the famous old Moore family of Dublin; his grandfather was the eminent Rory O. Moore, and his uncle was the Moore mentioned with such unction in Dickens' novel, "Oliver Twist." He has resided in Texas for eleven years, and has twice been elected to the Legislature as the champian of the fence-cutters. His cousin, Henry Moore, is the managing editor of the St. Louis Post Dispatch, and another cousin is widely known as the Sweet Singer of Michigan.
