

THE TANIS STONE.—The Smithsonian Institution has been advised of the shipment on the part of the khedive of Egypt of a fine copy in plaster of the celebrated tanis stone. This stone, as it may be remembered, was found some years ago near one of the deltas of the Nile, and contains a long priestly history carved on its three faces, in hieroglyphic, Greek and Egyptian respectively; the Greek thus furnishing an interpretation to the other two. This answers the same purpose as the rosetta stone, in supplying a key for deciphering the ancient Egyptian characters, and is in some respects superior to that, as having a more extensive vocabulary. With one tanis stone have also been shipped to the institution over one hundred impressions in paper, or squeezes, of bas-reliefs taken from various monuments in Egypt, many of which have a very great interest.
