

JUNE

BY SARA G. CHAPMAN. Days of sweetest and waiting, Days of anxious hope and fear, Days of longing, wholly fruitless, Seemed wide from all most dear, Sing my soul some wondrous measure, Who rule the realms of air; Something grand, and high, and holy, Which will make my life more fair.

ONLY AN IRISH BOY.

THE FORTUNES OF ANDY BURKE.

CHAPTER XIII. GODFREY'S REBELLION.

Having made his complaint, Godfrey waited impatiently for the recess to close, in order that he might see retribution fall upon the head of Andy. He had not long to wait, for the boys would have applauded again, but Mr. Stone said, waving his hand: "Once is enough, boys. Time is precious, and we must go on with our lessons. First class in arithmetic."

Godfrey had been equally surprised and angry at the turn that affairs had taken. He was boiling with indignation, and nervously moved about in his seat. After a slight pause, having apparently taken his determination, he took his cap and walked toward the door. Mr. Stone's attention was drawn to him, and he said, "Where are you going, Godfrey?"

"Well, Herman, what do you know about it? How you present?" "Yes, sir, I was. It was just as Alfred said."

"What have you to say, Godfrey?" asked Mr. Stone, sternly. "I don't mean to be insulted by an Irish boy," said Godfrey, haughtily.

"Remember where you are, sir, and speak in a more becoming manner. Did you attack Alfred Parker, as he says?" "He had no business to run into me."

"Answer my question." "Yes, I did." "And did you kneel on his breast?" "Yes."

"Oblige me by saying, yes, sir." "Yes, sir," said Godfrey, reluctantly. "Why do you complain, then, of being treated in a similar manner by Andrew?" "He has no business to touch me."

"If he had not interfered when he saw you mistreating his young school-fellow, I should have been ashamed of him," said the teacher. "This is far chimerical in the sentiment of the boys that they almost involuntarily applauded; and one boy, rising, exclaimed: 'Three cheers for the teacher!'"

"The three cheers were given with a will, and though they were, strictly speaking, out of order, Mr. Stone was a sensible man, and the only notice he took of it, was to say: 'Thank you, boys. I am glad to find that you agree with me on this point, and that your sympathies are with the weak and oppressed. Godfrey Preston, your complaint is dismissed. I advise you to cease acting the part of a bully, or you may get another similar lesson. Andrew, when you exert your strength, I hope it will always be in as just a cause. You may take your seat, and the boys would have applauded again, but Mr. Stone said, waving his hand:

"Once is enough, boys. Time is precious, and we must go on with our lessons. First class in arithmetic." Godfrey had been equally surprised and angry at the turn that affairs had taken. He was boiling with indignation, and nervously moved about in his seat.

Godfrey had been equally surprised and angry at the turn that affairs had taken. He was boiling with indignation, and nervously moved about in his seat.

"Yes, with the note. If Mr. Stone does not apologize, you need not go to-morrow. I will go up-stairs and write it once." The note was quickly written, and putting it carefully into his inside coat-pocket, Godfrey went to school. As he entered the school-room he stepped up to the desk, and handed the note to Mr. Stone.

"Here is a note from my mother," he said. "Very well," said the teacher, taking it gravely. "As it was not yet quite time to summon the pupils, he opened it at once. This was what he read: 'MR. STONE—Sir: My son Godfrey informs me that you have treated him in a very unjust manner, for which I find it impossible to account. I shall be glad if you can find time to call at my house this evening, in order that I may hear from your lips an explanation of the occurrence. Yours in haste, LUCINDA PRESTON.'

"Preston," said Mr. Stone, after reading this note, "you may say to your mother that I will call this evening, for which I find it impossible to account. I shall be glad if you can find time to call at my house this evening, in order that I may hear from your lips an explanation of the occurrence. Yours in haste, LUCINDA PRESTON."

"I did not praise him for that. I praised him for promptly interfering to prevent Godfrey from abusing a boy smaller and younger than himself." "Godfrey had good cause for punishing the boy you refer to. He acted in self-defence. He has doubtless misinterpreted the affair to you, madame, as he did to me."

"You take this Andrew Burk's word against his?" "I form my judgment upon the testimony of an eye-witness, and from what I know of your son's character." "From your own statement, this low Irish boy."

"To whom do you refer, madame?" "To the Irish boy." "I have yet to learn that he is low." "Do you mean to compare him with my son?" "In wealth, no. Otherwise, you must blame me for saying that I hold him entirely equal in respectability, and in some important points his superior."

"At this moment there was an interruption. Godfrey had been listening at the doorway, but finding that difficult to do, he opened the door slightly, but in his interest managed to stumble against it. The door flew open, and he fell forward upon his knees on the carpet of the sitting-room."

"[TO BE CONTINUED.] AGRICULTURAL. The best netting for poultry yards is the woven wire of 1 1/2 or 2 inch mesh. It is made in rolls of 100 feet, 2 or 3 feet wide and costs about 1 1/2 cents a square foot. Cotton netting costs nearly as much and soon rots, while wire is durable.

Pumpkins should be planted as soon as the soil is warm, and in a rich soil as possible. The best time to plant is in the month of May. It should be advisable perhaps to do so in the full moon, as a good-sized, handsome, golden-yellow pumpkin possesses some similarity in shape and color to the round yellow moon that is occasionally seen at the seasons when the pumpkins are ripening, and who knows what follow-feeding there may be between the yellow orb in the sky and those on the ground looking up to it?

HERNANDO.

HERNANDO will make the season of 1883 at the old stand NEAR BELL'S & PLANKS, 142 N. FERRY, in Charlottetown. He is a beautiful dark bay horse, 15 hands high, imported from Kentucky two years ago, at a cost of $1,200. His breeding cannot be excelled by any other horse in America. He has a fine body, style, graceful and elastic step, and now (without training) leads fast. This horse is sired by the famous sire of trotters, Almont.

First Dam—Janice Gray, by American Clay, son of Cassin M. Clay, Junr. Second Dam—By Morgan Rattler, son of Hale's Green Mountain Horgan. Third Dam—The Dam of Lady Hunt by Marbrino Chief, sire of Lady Thorne. Fourth Dam—By Gann, son of American Edgemoor. Fifth Dam—By Potomac, son of Imported Diamond. Sixth Dam—By Baromet, son of Imported Baromet.

Almont's pedigree is too well known to need description. He has sired more trotters with record than any other horse, and with two crops they trotted a double team, in 2 1/2, the fastest time ever made by a double team. 200 HERNANDO will be allowed to serve a limited number of mares at $25 the season.
