he cabinets, the carpet littered with ner cast-off clothing; the dressinglue lines of her veins, gold dust air, blanc de perle poudre d'Olymp o smear over her fresh, fair young ace-I know not what besides.

Sir Richard stood for a momen ooking at the disordered dressing able, then he mechanically lifted ittle sponge, from which a thick car ine cream was onzing and staining he lace valance of the table, and with a slight frown, dropped it on to ound, his eyes fell upon Cupid's dis-

I tried to get away before he reurned, but was so overcome with ervousness and excitement that, fter moving a few steps, I staggered back against the wall, and crouched away from him in speechquivering hands over his eyes, as if to shut out the truth that the shastly dawn was forcing upon him.

My fear, however, was needless forgotten my very existence, for he passed me swiftly by, and, flinging pen the window with a shuddering sigh that sounded like a sob, his head dropped forward on to the sill, and I think I felt what was in crite that ever misled an honest man, and ordered me out of his house, out of his sight.

I went only as far as my room where I remained for, I think, more han hour at the window, listening for Lady Nesbitt's return.

The dawn broke coldly and miserbly; the servants came back in different parties, and, merely changng their carnival costumes for their working dresses, were busying themselves drowsily about the house, when she arrived at last. Before any one had time to reach the hall, before the footman had got off his box to ring the bell I had the door open and my finger upon my ips to enjoin silence.

"Sister, you must die!" A tall, gaunt Trappist monk, wit yellow face and dark, glittering eyes, confronted me thus unexpectedly upon the doorstep.

"Monsieur!" I stammered, staring at him open-mouthed.

"Sister, you must die!" he repeated, staggering up to me; and a most antiascetic whiff of mingled tobacco, brandy and champagne was wafted toward me, and made me shrink even urther back, with the intention of her eves. slamming the door in his face, when half-masked Pierrot pushed him inceremoniously aside, and, executing vigorous pas seul on the pavement laid Birdie in my arms-such a pale. sickly looking, peevish little Cupid she went on : 'Suppose we post--half asleep, and wrapped in nother's fur cloak.

Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

As old age comes on most people suffer more or less from derangements of the kidneys. With some there are years of pains and aches, with others Brights's disease sets in and the end comes quickly. Fortunately many have learned about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and are enabled by their use to keep the kidneys healthy and active.

Mr. Richard e Preston, Osborne, Lambton County, Ont. asps: "Seventeen years ago I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills when mny back was so bad that to stoop or rise was torture to me. The kidneys were in bad condition, but these pills entirely freed me of back pains. I have used them ever since, whenever the kidneys would get out of orders, and now, at eighty years, am well and hearty, thanks to this grand medicine."
